RUSH AID TO ALLIED ARMIES IN RUSSIA

Paris, April 9.—Evacuation of Odessa by allied forces was confirmed this afternoon.

Earlier advices said that Ukrainian soviet troops had entered the city.

London, April 9.—The advance guard of the new British relief expedition into Northern Russia is expected to sail from Tilbury tonight, the Star stated this afternoon. The troops are going to the Archangel front.

An official appeal was published today for volunteers to join a relief force for the allied-American Archangel front.

As regards the alleged mystification as to the origin of the hints of an impending disaster which have been filling the air for the last few days, Universal Service is able to state that publication of the reports was allowed from the authoritative channels whence all war news emanates.

The situation is further complicated by General March's cabled statement that the Americans will be withdrawn as soon as the passage is ice-free.

"Is the Kuti-Amara bungling likely to be duplicated?" is the question on all lips here.

The Daily Express essays to tear the veil from the official reticence in an editorial, saying:

"There is something highly suspicious in the method of announcing the danger to the allied forces in Northern Russia. For months there has been no hint of danger; now, with the twinkling of an eye the war secretary lifts the curtain from a totally different picture.

"The British, who were said to be in no danger, are now shown to be in urgent danger, and a new army must be dispatched.

"Why this belated discovery of a peril long existent? Is it a fact that Churchill's colleagues in the cabinet were never informed and that the statement about the danger was without their knowledge?"

GERMANY IN FEAR OF GENERAL REVOLT

Berlin, April 8, via London, April 9).—The first step toward German, Russian and Hungarian Bolsheviki was taken at Munich today, when a proletariat dictatorship of Bavaria was proclaimed.

Berlin trembles on the balance, fearing a general uprising.

The Soviet Congress opened here today. Two hundred and eighty-eight Independent Socialists were present, but no representatives from Bavaria nor members of the ministry.

An attempt was made to send further commissions to the Red governments of Russia and Hungary, but the motions were shouted down.

George Ledebour, leader of the Radical Socialists, was released from prison just as the congress opened.

Artillery and machine guns have been planted to command the square in the front of Chancellors Palace in the event of an outbreak.

Three-year-old John C. Clinton was drowned today in the Tufts College reservoir, belonging to the Metropolitan water system. He was the son of Thomas H. and Bridget Clinton of No. 53 Chetwind road, Somerville. With his brother James, aged four, John was playing on the brink of the reservoir. When he fell in John rushed home and told his mother, whose cries aroused neighbors. Harold E. Rogers of No. 351 Boston avenue rescued the child's body.

Demobilizing of 26th to Be Completed in Two Days

Men of the 26th Division are to be discharged on April 28 and 29, instead of on four days, as was at first expected. The 101st, 103d, 104th Infantry Regiments and the 101st Engineers will be discharged on April 28, and the remained of the unit on April 29.

Physical examinations, which must precede the mustering out of the men will be given from April 21 to 28, with the exception of the 25th and 26th, which are the days of the parade and the subsequent movement of the troops.

MAYOR SAYS: 'PUT GRAFT CHARGE IN WRITING'

"Tell it to the Finance Commission," was the gist of Mayor Andrew J. Peters' answer today to the charges of graft at City Hall made by John L. Donovan, so-called "Mayor of Chinatown," before the legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs yesterday.

Donovan said, among other things, that "there is more graft going on at City Hall now than at any other time in the history of the city."

The Mayor said today:

"If those men have any actual charges against the honesty of any of the administration's acts, and will submit their charges to me in writing, I will be glad to give them to the Finance Commission. Then we could have a real investigation."

TROOPS BATTLE THE SPARTACANS IN MULHEIM

London, April 9.—Dispatches from Cologne say that martial law has been declared at Mulheim following a battle between Spartacans and government troops in which four soldiers were killed with hand grenades.

The battle started when the troops broke up a meeting of strikers. The battle developed into house-to-house fighting.

Martial law has been declared at Dusseldorf.

Hand grenades were thrown at government troops that were entering Essen and two soldiers were killed. There is much plundering by civilians at Essex.

At Magdeburg where Spartacans arrested Otto Landsberg, minister of justice, and General Von Kleist, looters seized 760,000 marks' worth of supplies. The Reds occupied the wharves.

The strikers in the Ruhr district of Rhenish Prussia now number 400,000.

A dispatch today from Berlin says the central government, headed by President Ebert, will not recognize the new soviet government of Bavaria, established at Munich. This has been officially announced.

Mammoth Gold Star for 26th Parade

MONGOLIA TO GET BIG WELCOME

Troopship Due at 7 A. M. Tomorrow; Details for 26th Parade

A mammoth golden star, representing approximately 2,200 men, will immortalize in the eyes of hundreds of thousands of New Englanders on April 25 the brave lads of the Yankee Division who now sleep beneath wheat fields in France. This emblem of respect and mourning will be carried by their comrades-in-arms in the big parade which starts at 1 o'clock on that afternoon.

Where New Yorkers gazed on a casket carried on a gun carriage, Boston will see but the star. That in itself will be sufficient to bring to the eyes of all witnessing the great military spectacle, the mist of sympathy and recollection. To those whose loved ones were spared it will bring right home a keen sense of realization of the horrors of war.

Announcement that this banner would be carried in the parade was made today, following a meeting of army officers at the Northeastern headquarters. At the same time it was announced that streamers would be carried by each regiment and unit

YOUNG GIRLS HELD IN DRUG RAID IN NEW YORK

New York, April 9.—Two pretty girls and a number of youths in early twenties were held today following a series of raids, in which six physicians and four druggists were arrested, against the sale of narcotics. Detectives said they could have brought in more than a hundred young girls who have been obtaining cocaine and other drugs on prescriptions from physicians.

LOBBY OUT TO BEAT WOMEN

Campaign at State House Against 48-Hour Week Bill for Industries

The biggest lobby in years today haunted the State House, in an eleventh-hour attempt to kill the forty-eight-hour bill for women and children in the industries.

Headed by Channing Smith of Leicester, of the Cherry Valley Mills, active member of the Associated Industries and opponent of the minimum wage and other laws designed to better the working conditions of the women and children, the lobbyists came from every corner of the State. "If you can't kill the bill, stick in these amendments," was the cry of the lobbyists to the House members.

One of the amendments proposed a fifty-one instead of a forty-eight-hour week. Another would allow the mill owners and mercantile and industrial establishments to work the women and children ten hours a day. The third would prevent the bill from becoming operative until July 1, 1920.

Among the lobbyists were George Wheelwright of the Back Bay, Arthur C. Comins and Donald Tulloch of Worcester, the latter an active lobbyist of the Metal Trades Associations. Comins is the representative of the employers on the Minimum Wage Commission.

The bill has passed the Senate. It was given a reading in the House by a vote of 172 to 5. It is now before the House on the question of final passage. Unless there is a terrible flop by the members the bill seems sure of success after a generation of conflict, with the employers on one side and organized labor and such organizations as the Women's Trade Union League on the other.

MORE THAN 10,000,000 TO PAY FEDERAL TAXES

By WINDER R. HARRIS.

Washington, April 9.—Five million Americans will pay income taxes this year. This is nearly 2,000,000 more than those who paid last year. More than 10,000,000 persons will pay Federal taxes of all kinds under the collections now being made. Commissioner Daniel C. Roper said the total amount to be collected under the new revenue law would be considerably higher than the estimate of $4,000,000,000 made at the time Congress enacted the law.

Seek to Change Stand of Mill Owners on Arbitration

At a conference in Lawrence today between Mayor John J. Hurley, members of the City Council and a committee of twenty-five business and professional men representing the workers on strike, a meeting was arranged with Governor Coolidge at the State House, Boston, tomorrow morning at 10:30 to discuss the strike situation, with a hope of trying to influence the mill owners to consent to Henry B. Endicott as arbiter. The strikers' representative said the strikers want arbitration and will accept Mr. Endicott as arbiter. Up to the present the mill officials say they have nothing to arbitrate.

Unless the mill owners agree to arbitrate, Governor Coolidge today was prepared to force a public investigation to fix the blame for the continuance of the Lawrence textile strike.

That fact was obtained from a source very close to the executive office and is accurate.

SHOTS FIRED IN STRIKE RIOT AT LAWRENCE

Lawrence, April 9.—A serious riot, in which two mounted police officers were set upon and one badly hurt and shots fired, occurred in the Syrian quarter shortly before 7 o'clock today and resulted in five arrests.

The trouble started near Hampshire and Elm streets in what is known as "the Plains." Mounted Officer Pendergast saw a worker assaulted and rushing to his assistance, jumped off his horse to place the man under arrest. He chased the latter through an alleyway and a crowd followed and jumped on the officer, after he alighted from his horse. He was manid, punched, and kicked.

Mounted Officer Waite rushed to help him and when he left his horse he was struck over the head by a club wielded by one of the mob. He was knocked senseless.

Just at this time, Marshal O'Brien and a detail of police were passing in an auto, and seeing the disturbance, jumped out of the machine. One of the officers was chasing Officer Waite's alleged assailant, when the man, Mike Kamar, ran directly into the hands of Marshal O'Brien and Inspector Byron. Kamar had a policeman's club in his hand when arrested, and it is alleged he hit Officer Waite with it.

Shots were fired by members of the mob from an alleyway off Hampshire street, near Pine. The riot call was sounded, and nearly 100 police officers were dispatched to the scene.

The men arrested are: Israel Jacobs, a returned soldier, charged with creating a disturbance; Michael Kamer, charged with disturbance; carrying a dangerous weapon and assault upon Officer Waite; James Morlin, disturbance and carrying a dangerous weapon, and Abdella Bow, disturbance. The men are all Syrians.

Tallow's Soda Water Bottlers' Ass'n.

Governor Coolidge has reached the opinion that the time has come for the State to use the last resort—an official investigation to place the odium for the continuance of the strike upon the heads of the guilty—unless both sides agree to arbitrate their differences and bring peace, quiet and prosperity to the great textile centre on the Merrimack.

The mill strikers have agreed without reservation to accept Henry H. Endicott and his terms. The owners refuse. One of them is "too busy" to arbitrate.

Governor Coolidge's attitude can be accurately stated for the first time.

He had hoped that both sides, "like reasonable men," would get together and iron out their differences. The power to investigate and to line up public sentiment against the guilty side, he regarded as "the last resort."

SUSPECTS TAKEN AT GUN POINT ON DEVONSHIRE ST.

Fred H. Wolf, a Lowell express driver, and Henry Shapiro of Norwood were arrested in an automobile at Devonshire and Summer streets today by Inspectors Donovan, Mitchell and Murray at revolver point. They were charged with theft of $225 worth of shoes from the American Railway Express Co.s' offices in Lowell. The police say they tricked Wolf and Shapiro at Lowell into believing they were prospective buyers who were to meet them on Devonshire street on signal of three blasts of the auto horn. When the signal was given the inspectors arrested the pair.

BAGGAGE OF MEN LOOTED

Thieves Steal Chaplain's Vestments and Destroy Sacred Chalice

Camp Devens, April 9.—A roar of rage went up from Yankee Division soldiers today at accumulating instances of looting of their bags and trunks smewhere between Brest, France, and this camp. One hundred and fifty pieces of baggage have been discovered so far rifled of cherished souvenirs of the World War.

The last straw was the looting of the baggage of Rev. George R. L. Connor of Holyoke, one of the chaplains of the 101st Infantry. Father Connor found that not only some of his priestly vestments had been stolen, but also that the thieves had broken a gold chalice.

Some of the vestments and the broken chalice were found later stuffed into the rifled bag of Lieutenant-Colonel John J. Barry. Colonel Barry's bag had been slashed open and looted. Among his missing property are two valuable pairs of field glasses.

One pair was given him twelve years ago by men of the former "Fighting Ninth."

The thieves, after rifling the colonel's bag, had thrust the vestments and chalice of Chaplain Connor inside to get them out of the way. The bag was worthless to them, first because it had been cut open, next because Colonel Barry's name is on it.

Colonel Barry is doubly incensed at the theft of his own property and the sacreligious plundering of Father Connor's baggage. The colonel said today:

"An example ought to be made of the first man caught looting our bags."

WILSON TO CALL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE TO SOLVE U.S. PROBLEMS

SEEK 'GET TOGETHER' PROGRAM FOR CAPITAL AND LABOR

Washington, April 9.—President Wilson, upon his return to this country, will issue a call for an industrial conference to be held in New York or Chicago. The purpose will be to enable capital, labor and the government to join hands in an amicable program for readjusting industry.

The President has already received the suggestion in a report from Washington and is understood to favor it. The report suggests a clarification of the industrial situation by the two following moves on the part of the Chief Executive:

1. A call for an industrial conference, or parliament, to devise a constructive program to meet the peace needs of the country's business life.

2. Reaffirmation of the authority of the War Labor Board as a co-operative tribunal of justice, during the transitory period, or until the industrial conference conclusions are put into effect.

The President has received numerous suggestions as to the personnel of the industrial conference which will number close to 100 persons, it is believed.

Suggested employers' representatives have been J. P. Morgan, Charles M. Schwab, Judge E. H. Gary, John D. Rockefeller, Henry C. Frick, Henry Ford, J. Ogden Armour, John D. Ryan and John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

MEN ON LABOR'S SIDE.

Labor's representatives may be taken from the following: Samuel Gompers, W. S. Carter, John Fitzpatrick, Frank Morrison, Andrew Furuseth, John P. Frey, Miss Mary Anderson, James H. Maurer, W. D. Mahon, William H. Johnston, William L. Hutcheson, Sidney Hillman, Hugh Francy, Austin B. Garretson and James Duncan.

Intermediaries, representing the government and the general public as well, would include men and women from every walk of life. Some names suggested are former President Taft, joint chairman of the War Labor Board; Justices Brandeis and Holmes of the United States Supreme Court; Fremont Older, Frank I. Cobb, John J. Spurgeon, Arthur Brisbane, Medill McCormick, Professor Ripley of Harvard, President Eliot of Harvard, W. G. McAdoo, Frank P. Walsh, Basil M. Manly, Elihu Root, Miss Jane Addams, Herbert M. Baruch, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Archbishop Hayes, Edward N. Hurley and Secretary Wilson, Secretary Redfield, Secretary Baker and Secretary Lane.

The proposed conference, it is said, would formulate a program which would provide for the automatic extinction of the War Labor Board.

Matin Says Wilson Order for Liner is to Intimidate France

By ROBERT J. PREW,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, April 8.—The Matin, in a bitter article today complains that "President Wilson's order for the return of the liner George Washington to Brest was used to intimidate France to make concessions," adding: "It is high time to tell President Wilson that France's demands are no more than just."

The demands of England and America with reference to Germany's colonies and the creation of a League of Nations were met, continued the Matin, but with no satisfaction to France.

One section of the French press is showing acute dissatisfaction over the present developments in the negotiations.

"After Prinkipo, Danzig and Budapest, the name of Odessa is symbolic of the failure to restore Europe," says the Echo de Paris.

The Figaro expresses the fear that half solutions will only "aggravate the difficulties."

The Ukrainian Soviet troops are reported to have captured Odessa. French and Greek troops have been defending the city.

age. This should be done to protect the property of the returning men of the Yankee Division. In their made rush for souvenirs the thieves did not even spare sacred vessels of the church."

The soldiers are of the opinion that much of the looting was done after transports arrived at Boston. It is known that one man was arrested by intelligence officers on Commonwealth Pier. He was said to have been caught with the "goods" in the form of a German helmet which had been stolen from a soldier's baggage.

A man has been arrested in camp charged with similar looting.

The soldiers' baggage from the transports was loaded on baggage cars attached to the special troop trains which carried the Y. D. men from pier to camp.

Instances of baggage having been broken open were reported from the pier. But the majority of cases were discovered when the men received their trunks and bags after arriving at camp.

War souvenirs seem to be the chief quarry of the thieves. The articles stolen include German helmets, war crosses, bayonets, revolvers, shell fragments, German money and uniforms and French trinkets. The latter were bought in quantity by the returning soldiers, mainly with an eye toward brightening the eyes of sundry girls back home.

The feelings of a soldier who bought a dainty lacy bit of French embroidery or a Parisian pin for his sweetheart, brought it carefully all the way back and then had it to a baggage looter may be imagined.

JAIL STORMED BY MOB TO GET NEGRO PRISONER

Hagerstown, Md., April 8.—A mob of 1,000 persons charged the jail in Berkeley Springs, W. Va., early today and battered down the door in an attempt to seize James Perkins, a young Martinsburg negro, arrested on suspicion of assaulting Mrs. Ernest Zimmerman, twenty-six years old. The prisoner was removed in time by a cordon of ten deputies, and rushed by auto from the rear of the jail to Martinsburg. Mrs. Zimmerman's condition is believed exceedingly serious.

AWAIT THE MONGOLIA.

Latest advices received from the troopship Mongolia indicate that she will arrive as per schedule. Unquestionably early risers will be treated to a whistling serenade such as they have not heard since that morning in November when Ferdinand Foch permitted the cessation of hostilities on all fronts. Army authorities ashore have not found it possible to yield to the request of Brigadier-General John H. Sherburne that the docking be at 9 o'clock rather than at 7.

The following units are on board, according to the wireless message picked up by the Naval Radio Station at Otter Cliff, Me., and sent to the Northeastern Department:

PLANS FOR RECEPTION

Plans for the reception of the Mongolia remain as announced. The welcoming craft will leave their respective docking places at 5.30 and steam down to President Roads, where the big ship will be awaiting their coming. After a short stay there the trip up the harbor will be started, so as to permit of the docking at 7 o'clock.

Today General Sherburne sent a wireless to Major-General Edwards acknowledging the receipt of his message of greeting. General Sherburne's wireless follows:

Officers and men of Artillery Brigade appreciate and acknowledge with pleasure the cordial welcome contained in your message to them. If physical conditions allow, request ship dock 9 o'clock, Summer time, instead of 7.

Members of the various reception committees have received a great number of applications for tickets on boats going down the harbor to greet the Mongolia. They are totally unable to meet all the requests. From the Mayor's reception committee a request has come that all those holding tickets who do not care to go, owing to the early hour of arrival, return their tickets to the committee at once. Thus those eager to go under any conditions will be supplied. People from Rhode Island and Ohio who have come to Boston especially for this greeting are still without tickets.

Following a session today members of the City Hotel Men's Association made an announcement which should be pleasing to all members of the Yankee Division at Camp Devens whose homes are not in Boston. Beginning tonight and continuing until after the parade on June 25, the hotels will provide lodgings each night and breakfast in the morning for 500 men nightly.

LODGING FOR SOLDIERS.

Each hotel has set aside ten good rooms for this patriotic hospitality. All a soldier on a 24-hour furlough need do is present his pass at one of the hotels and thus receive his room assignment. With a free breakfast in the morning the expenses of his trip down to Boston will be reduced to a minimum. In fact, his only expense, aside from incidentals, will be 66 cents for the reduced fare round trip from Ayer to this city.

At the meeting of the parade committee today it was announced that bands would be secured and stationed at different parts of the parade route. Thus the players on the regimental bands will be enabled to secure rest from time to time and music for the marchers will be almost continuous.

Parade regulations call for a salute to the Governor of Massachusetts at the State House, when the orders will be eyes left, and to the Mayor of Boston, at his reviewing stand, when the orders will be "eyes right."

Major General Edwards has announced that he will ride mounted with Major-General Hale at the head of the parade. His original divisional staff, or at least as many of its members as are yet available, will ride with him.

GENERAL EDWARDS' STAFF.

General Edwards has conferred with General Hale regarding the parade and has offered his cooperation in making the parade a big success. They are close personal friends, having been classmates at West Point. General Edwards commends General Hale for his excellent work with the men since assuming command of the outfit.

Offers to Build 150 Steel Cargo Ships at Reduced Price

Washington, April 9.—An offer to build 150 steel cargo carrying steamers of 12,000 tons each at only $149 per dead weight ton has been made by the Submarine Boat Corporation of Port Newark, N. J., it was announced by the United States Shipping Board today. In a letter to the company, stating that he would "take the matter up at once," Chairman Hurley said:

"Most prices mentioned for 1919 have been from $185 to $225. The receipt of such a bid from one of our best yards at this period in the development of our shipbuilding industry will be most gratifying to the country, as it is safe to assume that if we can build ships at those figures now, in a short time the prices will be further substantially reduced."

the Journal today, has practically decided to appeal to the associated powers to police Germany and keep order with their armed forces should the Bolshevist coup in Bavaria spread throughout the country.

The information concerning this determination on the part of Ebert and Scheidemann was received by the Journal from its Zurich correspondent.

This correspondent asserts that a cabinet council was called in Berlin and that the situation was considered so menacing that the appeal to the associated powers was agreed upon as the only hope of saving Germany from chaos.

Government troops of proved loyalty are not sufficient in number to put down Spartacan uprisings should they start up all over Germany, as they now threaten to do.

United States May Consider Separate Peace With Germany

By SIDNEY DARK.

(Exclusive Cable by Universal Service and the London Daily Express.)

Paris, April 9.—I am informed by a high American authority that President Wilson has determined to have his way about peace, but if the treaty does not coincide with his theories he will issue a statement and leave Europe to settle her own affairs.

If this happens a rapprochement between America and Germany will be an immediate possibility. The President is wrathful over the French attitude.

By a Staff Correspondent of Universal Service. Special Wireless Dispatch.

Paris, April 9 — (by Radio via London.)—President Wilson is expected to urge his associates in the council of four to accept the position already fully outlined by him, thereby meeting American expectations.

Paris was again filled with conflicting rumors today as a result of the order to the steamer George Washington to proceed immediately to Brest. It is becoming increasingly evident that a crisis in the negotiations is at hand and that an outcome one way or the other is certain before the end of the present week.

Officials close to Mr. Wilson today recalled the opening sentence of the President's farewell speech at the Metropolitan Opera House, in New York on the eve of his departure for France March 4, when he said:

"I will not come back until it's all over, over there."

Those officials added that this position was completely maintained by the President today. They said this in connection with rumors of a possible third trip to Europe.

President Wilson wants permanent peace and is willing to make material concessions to secure it. However, he is unwilling to agree to any concession that alter his fourteen points, and other matters dealt with in the exchanges between the United States and the Allies when the armistice was agreed on.

The letter was signed by H. H. Wells, chief of staff.

"SLEW HEWITT BECAUSE HE LOVED VICTIM'S WIFE," SAYS BOY OF 18

URGED TO KILL, SAYS GRANT

Defendant Describes Why and How He Killed Farmer

Pittsfield, April 9. — The alleged written confession of Lincoln McKinley Grant, eighteen, that he murdered Miles Hewitt, a Hancock road farmer, the night of February 28, 1917, was introduced in evidence today at the trial here. The case is being heard in the Superior Court before Judge Marcus Morton of Newton. It is understood that the defence will seek to establish insanity.

A fight to prevent introduction of the confession halted Tuesday's court proceedings. It was admitted by Judge Morton after a private hearing. The alleged confession was written when Grant was only sixteen. It is dated April 19, 1917, the night the body of Hewitt was discovered in a refuse heap in the basement of the barn.

Charges that Mrs. Hewitt had "put him up to" the deed, and that her sister, Mrs. Frank Noistering, had threatened "to do it herself," were startling features of the document.

DESCRIBES KILLING.

The writer described the killing of Hewitt with an axe and burial of the body in the heap of refuse. The confession continued:

"Then I went into the house and said it was all over, and Mrs. Hewitt said, 'I am glad.' Mrs. Hewitt put me up to it. She asked me to do it a week before I did it, and said, 'If you don't, then we can never be together.' Her sister, Mrs. Frank Noistering, had trouble with Hewitt and threatened to do it herself, and said: 'If I don't get you my husband will.'

"I wanted to leave three or four times, but Mrs. Hewitt did not want me to, and I stayed for her sake. I did the murder for her sake and not mine. Mrs. Hewitt promised to take care of Hewitt after I did the job."

The document is signed by three witnesses: Chief of Police John L. Sullivan, and Officer John A. Bliss and William P. McCormick, and sworn to by the clerk of the District Court.

Attorney Robert M. Stevens, chief counsel for the defence, in cross-examination had Chief Sullivan picture the dramatic scene when Grant, then a boy of sixteen, was taken into the dimly-lighted cellar and forced to pick up the skull purported to be that of Hewitt.

MADE HIM TOUCH BODY.

Q.—Did he show fear or remorse?

A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you expect a confession?

A.—Yes. I had a right to make him touch the body.

Q.—Do you think that fair treatment of a boy of sixteen? A.—Under the circumstances, yes.

According to Chief Sullivan's testimony, Grant told the police that Mrs. Hewitt had often embraced him, and that her mother had objected.

Inspector Daniel J. McColgan corroborated the testimony of Chief Sullivan.

Mrs. Hewitt, who is under bonds as an accessory before the fact was on the stand yesterday and denied any improper relations with Grant.

DORCHESTER MAN GIVEN CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL

Washington, April 9.—Seven Congressional Medals of Honor were awarded to two officers and five enlisted men for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in action," it is announced by the War Department.

One medal is awarded posthumously to First Lieutenant William S. Turner, 104th Infantry, of No. 25 Hinckley street, Dorchester, Mass., for rushing an enemy machine gun single-handed and killing the crew with his pistol.

"With the utmost bravery," says the citation, "he continued to lead his men over three lines of hostile trenches regardless of the fact that he had been wounded three times."

Hist! Poker Players! a "Friendly" Game Isn't Gambling

Boston police, attention!

Poker, as a "friendly game," is not gambling.

Providing "Kitty" is not in.

That's the glad news from New York anyhow. It came over the wires today. It is a decision from none less than Deputy Attorney Edward Swann of New York. Police Inspector Dominick Meury received the subpoenas for poker players in his district from Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith. Henry put the poker point up to Mr. Swann. The latter replied in part:

"It seems to have been held by the Court of Appeals in People versus Bright (293 N. Y., 78) that the members of a club, or their invited guests, who occasionally participate in games of draw poker at the club, do not make an habitual practice of such participation as a money making pursuit, and who participate in the game on equal terms with the other players and do not derive any benefit from the game through the medium of what is known as the 'kitty' or the like, are not common gamblers within the meaning of the Penal law."

Mr. Swann added that the mere occasional playing of a game of chance did not constitute the player "a common gambler."

Author Chambers' Son at Harvard Sings of Brave Sinn Fein

The following poem by Robert H. Chambers, son of the well-known author, Robert W. Chambers, appears in the current edition of the Harvard Magazine.

Chambers, who is a member of the sophomore class at Harvard, has selected as the subject for his poem the Sinn Fein movement.

THE SINN FEIN.

Paddy Reilly tapped me shoulder
And he whispered low to me,
"'Tis the auld sphot be the river
Where the gatherin' is to be;
Sure we'll raise the green again, b'hoys,
And auld Ireland will be free.
For the lads de march to Dublin
In the mornin'."

There was Murphy and O'Reiley,
There was Kelly, Flynn an' Burke;
There was Emmet from Killarney,
There was Fane from County Cork,
With De Valera and Plunkett,
Shay, O'Hara and O'Rourke,
An' they marched away to Dublin
In the mornin'.

There was twinty thousand others
At the dawnin' of the day
An' we shook our gilstenin' rifles
As we laughed and shouted gay
When the maids of Erin kissed us
As we started on our way;
Kissed the lads who marched to Dublin
In the mornin'.

'Twas on Sackville sthreet ut happened
Where we sthood without a fear,
Though the cartridge cases fallin'
Told us sure the ind was near,
But we grasped our empty rifles
And we met it with a cheer.
Sure the lads died well in Dublin
In the mornin'.

There's another scene at dawnin'
As the red sun rose again
On the castle wall in Dublin,
An' a line av blindfold men,
With the fresh-dug graves before thim
An' a firin' squad av ten:—
This for Ireland's sake in Dublin
In the mornin'.

Army Nurses Demand Military Rank in Future

Washington, April 9.—Army nurses now demobilizing are demanding military rank as a condition to further war service in our army. They say they would absolutely refuse to volunteer again unless present conditions were completely changed and rank were granted," said Miss Ella Phillips Crandall of New York, secretary of the committees on nursing of the Council of National Defence, today.

According to Miss Crandall, the army nurses are "bitterly resentful" of the government treatment of them. In answer to questions regarding future service, Miss Crandall said scores of nurses are writing, "Not unless rank is given to nurses." "Only in case nurses receive rank," "Only on condition that rank is conferred on nurses in order that they may be respected and their authority obeyed."

BOSTON WOMEN OFF FOR BERNE CONGRESS

Mrs. Edwin D. Mead and Professor Emily Balch Sail With Other Noted Women

Hoboken, N. J., April 9.—Ten delegates to the international Congress of Women, which for the first time in five years will be held next month in Berne, Switzerland, its sessions being interrupted by the world war, sailed today on the Holland-American liner Noordam.

Among the delegates were Mrs. Edwin D. Mead and Professor Emily Balch of Boston. Others in the party were Miss Jeannette Rankin, former Congresswoman from Montana; Miss Jane Addams and Dr. Alice Hamilton of Chicago and Mrs. Lewis R. Post of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Mead declared that the members of the congress wished to avoid as much as possible any great amount of publicity, until after they had reached France and Switzerland and had conferred with the delegates from the European countries. She said, however, that it was absolutely certain that the proposed peace program would be discussed at the congress and that all the American delegates were in favor of backing up the president and his original fourteen peace points.

FIRST SINCE 1914.

"This is the first session of the congress since 1914, when the war interrupted its sessions and we women believe that the renewal of these yearly meetings between the women of the world will help greatly to solve the many problems which we are facing today.

"We are in hopes that many delegates from the central powers will be present at the congress and we also believe that a delegate of Russia will also send a representation to Berne, for this will give us the opportunity to study the welfare of women and their needs in the countries where civil unrest, internal warfare and Bolshevism have run rampant since the overthrow of the Czar."

Miss Balch declared that one intended bringing before the congress a plan that every nation adopt measures whereby a woman would not lose her citizenship by marriage to a foreigner.

WILL VISIT BELGIUM

Miss Balch declared that she intended visiting Paris and Belgium before the sessions of the congress began and would take up with the delegates from those countries the question of the League of Nations from a woman's standpoint.

She said: "We are all in favor of the League of Nations, but think that there should be included in the draft many more things for the betterment and welfare of the people than it is included in it at the present time."

The Noordam carried a full passenger list of 250 Y. M. C. A. and Red Cross workers from the Y. M. C. A. and Red Cross who are going to France for a year's stay.

Snatch Heroes' Caps, Selling Them for 25 Cents

Twenty soldiers of the famous Yankee Division arrived at Camp Devens minus their overseas caps. The caps were sold to children in Norwood at 25 cents each by the crew of a railroad engine who, from their cab, snatched the caps from the doughboys as they leaned from a passing train waving to people assembled at the station.

TAPPER ASKS OPEN MEETING OF CHAMBER

Commerce Men Queried by Secretary McKibben About April Session

Another new phase in the Boston Chamber of Commerce dispute came to light today when members were circularized by Secretary James A. McKibben, asking whether they preferred to have the April meeting of the Chamber held at the Hotel Brunswick or at the Chamber building at Milk and India streets.

The board of directors met yesterday and received a petition from Albert K. Tapper and seventy-nine others, asking that an open meeting be held to discuss matters in controversy. A second petition, signed by 128 members, was received, asking that instead of an open meeting dispatched matters be put to a mail vote.

At the regular April meeting a nominating committee will be appointed to bring in a list of directors to be voted upon at the annual meeting in May. There are two slates in the field.

The insurgent element, from the chamber, it is said, claims that a meeting held at the Hotel Brunswick would be a social affair, in that it would be a complimentary luncheon to Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, and that neither fair nor a mail vote would satisfy men who want fair and unbiased counting.

Mrs. Dennin declared that she intended bringing before the congress a plan that every nation adopt measures whereby a woman would not lose her citizenship by marriage to a foreigner.

SAY IRISH MUST ACCEPT WHAT THEY GET

Have Killed Their Only Chance by Wrangling, in Opinion of British Press

By a Staff Correspondent of Universal Service.

Special cable dispatch.

London, April 9.—With the final decisions of Paris reported near at hand, the Irish problem has again come to the front in public interest and the British press is devoting many columns to its discussion.

"The English people are proud of their record in Ireland," says the Times. "They know the Irish imbroglio is having ill effect on the relations of Britain with her dominions and the United States. They would like nothing better than that a just and permanent settlement be discovered and be applied to charge away all the distress in that land of sorrows.

"But in Ireland the zeal of warring political ideals has eaten up the country. The British government must impose its own settlement upon Ireland, having failed to induce Irishmen to agree among themselves."

From its Dublin correspondent the Daily Mail received the following dispatch:

"Ireland has been called the 'island of saints,' but it is meriting the grim title, 'land of assassins.'

"Organized murder and outrage stalk through the country, and scarcely a week goes by without some terrible crime. It is said a secret society is responsible for this organized crime. This society, which is strong, is denounced by the Catholic church.

"Faced by a community too terrified to expose the crimes, the police are helpless and it is impossible to gain conviction. Only the powerful influence of the Church can prevent these crimes.

"The Ard Feis', the main society behind the Sinn Fein, with delegates from all parts of Ireland, will hold a public session in Dublin this week."

The Manchester Guardian says:

"Ireland is represented at the peace conference and has some hopes of President Wilson. She is awake to his sympathy. She is aware of the great and growing sympathy of the bulk of the American people as well as of our own dominions. She deems her cause well within the scope of the Wilson declarations accepted as a basis for the deliberations of the peace congress. She greatly desires that her case should be adjudicated from that great impartial tribunal."

BERT FORD'S CAMP DEVENS PAGE

ARMY MOURNS LOSS OF SAM BROWNE BELTS

By BERT FORD.

Camp Devens, April 9.—"Tough to turn Sam Browne belts into razor strops," said a captain in the 101st Infantry today.

"Generals, colonels, majors and all other officers look like a lot of top sergeants without their sammies," said a major. "Uniforms look incomplete. I feel half-dressed without my belt."

Every officer in the Yankee Division was obliged to lay aside his Sam Browne before leaving the transports. Under a general order all commanders of overseas troops must divest themselves of this military ornament.

In the majority of cases it has been a hardship because units made abroad were cut so short in the Sam Browne belt effectively. These military tunics look odd without the belt.

CHANGE FEELS STRANGE.

The only way to distinguish an officer is by the insignia on his shoulder or cap, and these are not recognizable at any great distance.

To those who had become accustomed to the Sam Browne belt abroad, the change is strange. It naturally does not look right to those who never served on the other side and whose vision never became accustomed to the belt embellishment.

Officers returning from overseas claim that the extension of the Sam Browne belt when they set foot on these shores was due to the sensitiveness of officers who never got a chance to go to France and who feel that the exhibition of Sam Browne belts by men who served overseas automatically effaces them in contrast.

Officers in the American Expeditionary Force, or at least the larger per cent. of them, are of the opinion that the men should be allowed to wear in the States what was good enough to fight in abroad. They claim that the folks at home ought to see them in the togs that they wore in France.

IMPROVES UNIFORMS.

The change would not have been so conspicuous if the Sam Browne belt had not topped off the American uniform in the most effective manner. Sam Browne belts of the New England officers of the British and French armies, American uniforms, plain or otherwise, are greatly improved by the belt.

The enlisted man had become so accustomed to the belt that he, too, find themselves in Camp Devens on the point of passing an officer without saluting. If not 50 per cent, then 100 per cent. of the officers that served overseas would ask to retain the belt.

The officers of the Yankee Division would be treated to a Sam Browne parade. Some hope that the privilege will be granted before they are mustered out. If it is doubtful. Officers of the 27th Division who wore them at a review in New York were placed under arrest for failure to carry out the order to discard the belt at their home armories.

The officers of the 26th Division have lived up to the motto "a man." They have posed each other relative to the change made in their appearance.

RESENT INTERFERENCE.

Judging from comment it would appear that the officers of the A. E. F. resent interference by officers who have remained at home, so far as it affects insignia. They claim that every officer who did not serve abroad knows it himself, that his friends are aware of it, and that the fact that fellow officers who got to France sported belts should not govern them in any way. It is felt that if they are offensive or out of place there their use or absence have been sanctioned abroad.

Radical changes in the American uniform were proposed from time to time abroad. For example, the adoption of the British khaki with the turned down collar was advised and rejected. "Slacks," another English feature, which are long trousers, were adopted, but were very little worn by American officers. Their use is confined in the French and British armies to the dining hours and rest periods.

The enlisted man's uniform overseas was the least attractive in the history of the country. The uniforms were poorly cut and made of rough, shoddy material. While serviceable in color, it was difficult, even impossible, for even the best built and handsomest men to look natty in them. Even officers of the most distinguished type looked unsmart when they put on doughboys' uniforms to discipline their men in battle. They had to do in order to avoid examinations and other complications if captured.

DOUGHBOY UNATTRACTIVE.

The American doughboy was well shod and warmly clothed but he was not made an attractive, in a military sense as he might have been. Critics tell that this was unfortunate in view of the fact that it was the greatest opportunity in the history of our country to show to advantage among foreign people. Criticism of earlier issues were much milder.

MORE THAN 800 JOBS FOUND FOR SOLDIERS

Camp Devens, April 9.—Over 800 jobs have been found for returned soldiers in the past few days through the United States employment service here.

The majority of the men will return to positions they held when they entered the service.

John J. Markey, in charge of the employment service, explains the difficulty of providing returned soldiers that "plums" and "soft jobs" are not easy to find. He tells all men who register that "this is no time for speculating on big jobs. Get back your former job and the experience you have gained in the army will bring you speedy promotion."

Gallagher, were in the party. Mr. Gallagher, head of the New England Tobacco Board, distributed over 10,000 cigarettes to the men.

Camp Devens, April 8.—No favoritism will be shown in arranging the parade of the 26th Division parade in Boston on April 25.

The line of march will be headed by an escort of Boston policemen. Then will come Major-General Harry C. Hale, commander of the 26th Division, riding on the right, and Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, its former commander, riding on the left.

Their respective staffs will follow on horseback, and behind them will come the various units, in order not yet definitely determined.

FOIL ATTEMPT TO FIRE LAWRENCE TENEMENT

Lawrence, April 9.—Another attempt to set fire to a piece of tenement property at No. 7 Valley street was reported to the police. The stairways of the house, a three-story structure, were saturated with kerosene and rags spread about. The blaze was discovered by one of the tenants. The block is occupied by six families. The fire is the eighth incendiary Lawrence has had inside of three weeks.

Who's Who in the 26th Division

Lieutenant-Colonel Frank P. Williams, Medical Corps, now with 26th Division Headquarters, to which he was transferred last month, was with the 26th Division with the same rank when it sailed for France. Prior to the war he was a professor at Tufts Medical School and instructor at Harvard Medical and a member of the staff of Boston Dispensary. He is a widely-known physician and surgeon and was born at Weymouth, Mass., forty-eight years ago. His residence is at No. 51 Auburn street, Brookline. He was married in 1890 to Marion S. Goodale. They have no children.

Colonel Williams first entered military service as a hospital steward in the 2d Brigade, M. V. M., in April, 1906, serving in the medical department in various grades until appointed lieutenant-colonel, chief of the medical department and surgeon-general, M. V. M., March 22, 1916. In August, 1917, he was assigned to the 26th Division as assistant surgeon and became sanitary inspector on the staff October 8. From the 26th he went to the 1st Army Corps while in France. From March to July, 1918, he was assigned to duty at the hospital at St. Maixent. In the last-named month he was sent to inspect the British reconstruction hospitals and was later given the job of building and commanding the Mesves hospital centre, the first reconstruction camp built by the United States. It was the largest hospital centre in the world, having 40,000 beds. He remained in charge until it closed, February 7, 1919.

LIEUT.-COL. WILLIAMS.

HEROES PREFER GOING HOME TO CITIZENSHIP

Camp Devens, April 9.—Twenty-three soldiers who served with various American units have declined to remain in camp until Monday next, the day on which they are to be made full-fledged citizens of Uncle Sam. They were willing to sacrifice their opportunity to become American citizens in order to return immediately to their homes.

Not one of those who refused to remain over and have conferred upon him the reward of citizenship, is a member of the "Yankee Division." They come from seventeen different New England, however, four of them from various small towns in Maine.

Captain Lesley D. Ordeen, officer of employment and naturalization, vainly endeavored to persuade the twenty-three men to remain in camp until Monday, and after their firm refusal to do so he signed a paper in which a statement that they preferred to go home immediately than to remain in camp a few days longer and become American citizens for life. Every man of the twenty-three has a good record as a fighter.

Several of these soldiers were those who, they entered the service, and the president had either applied for or had obtained their first naturalization papers. Many of them had lived in the United States long enough to take out final citizenship papers.

In all 375 unnaturalized American soldiers applied for final citizenship, but when called to the camp naturalization court only 344 appeared.

101ST TO HEAD LINE IN 26TH PARADE

Camp Devens, April 9.—The 101st Infantry, commanded by Colonel Edward L. Logan, will undoubtedly be given the right of line in the big Yankee Division parade to be held on Friday, April 25.

The headquarters troops will lead the column's escort to General Hale, and the Boston regiment will follow.

The men will wear helmets and carry gas masks. They will carry the full field equipment, including packs. The people will see them logged out as they were when they went into battle.

Arrangements have been in progress for weeks to procure enough horses for engineers entitled to mounts.

It is reported that any scarcity of animals will be overcome by procuring several teams from the parade of the 27th Division in New York city.

The transport station in camp here is in charge of subscription for the parade committee on this matter.

The initial contingent was paid off today. The entire units of the division will be paid as rapidly as possible. About $6,000,000 will soon be sent under guard from the United States Subtreasury in Boston to Camp Devens to pay the men of the Yankee Division their final allotment of $60 per man, prior to the muster out.

Major-General Morkin said today that the Yankee Division would be mustered out in the record time of forty-eight hours at the rate of about 10,000 men a day. The process will begin April 28 and, according to his plans, will be completed April 29.

On April 22 or 23 the final divisional review will be held in camp.

Y. D. BOXERS TO SHOW THEIR WARES

Two Carnivals to Be Held on Fenway Park Preceding and Following Parade

Camp Devens, Ayer, April 8.—Two big boxing carnivals will be held at Fenway Park, Boston, by men of the 26th Division, one on the night before the parade and one on the night of parade day. Between two and three thousand men of the Division will be spectators, as well as thousands of the public of New England. High-ofc, Senate of the Army and Navy will be guests.

There will be fifteen bouts of three rounds each night, at six weights, according to Lieutenant Carl Hood, division athletic officer in charge of arrangements, for which prizes have been offered by private citizens of Boston. There will be gold watches for first prizes, silver watches for second prizes, and there also will be consolation prizes for the losers.

Officers from the Department of the Northeast, sent here by General Edwards, conferred with Lieutenant Hood regarding details for the boxing carnivals. Lieutenant Hood said that the division boxing championships had been settled in France at Beomnoy following general Pershing's review of the Twenty-Sixth, but that many qualified boxers had not been able to enter the contests who are now able, and he looks for some lively scrapping.

Boxing champions of the Twenty-Sixth Division as they now stand are:

Private John Flynn, 104th Infantry, heavyweight.

Corporal Lewis Leonard, 101st Infantry, a North End boy, featherweight.

Private William L. Timothy, 102nd Field Artillery, lightweight.

Corporal Charles Wright, 102nd Infantry, welterweight.

Corporal John Morris, 101st Engineers, middleweight.

Regarding the baseball game between a 26th Division team and the Red Sox, to be played April 21, probably at Fitchburg, Lieutenant Hood stated it was planned to pick a team entirely of enlisted men, unless it was found necessary to put in an officer.

Lieutenant Thomas Shea, a Springfield Y. M. C. A. man, and former Harvard athlete, who returned from leave today will have baseball candidates out on the diamond tomorrow afternoon limbering them up. It is believed that First Lieutenant Charles Lannigan, former Harvard captain, of the 102d Field Artillery, and Lieutenant Shea will pick the Yankee Division team.

QUINCY MAN STRUCK BY AUTO INJURED

Quincy, April 9.—Robert Breen of No. 15 Cherry street, a conductor, employed by the Bay State Street Railway Company, was struck and injured by an automobile driven by George S. Anderson of River street, Braintree. Breen was alighting from his car when the accident happened. He was taken to the Quincy Hospital, where he was found to be suffering from cuts and contusions about the head and body.

MEDICAL EXAMS FOR MARRIAGE APPLICANTS

Trenton, N. J., April 9.—The New Jersey Assembly has passed a bill compelling applicants to submit to medical examination before licenses are issued.

Two Million Required to Pay Off 26th at Devens

Camp Devens, April 9.—Approximately $3,000,000 will be disbursed here this month.

Records will be shattered when 18,000 men of the 26th are paid off in two days, beginning April 28 or 29. Captain M. E. Toews will have charge of disbursements.

More than $2,000,000 will be requested for the final payroll and bonuses for the Yankee Division. This is exclusive of the March payments, which will be slightly over $600,000, between $250,000 and $300,000 will be paid to the permanent garrison force.

The Price of a GOOD Cup of Coffee

A good cup of coffee is really the beverage slogan of the United States. Everybody wants a good cup of coffee and if they haven't found it they're searching for it.

Good things cost more than inferior things. Price has everything to do with quality. Especially is this true of coffee.

Good coffee trees don't grow on poor land — and rich land means rich fertilization, intensive cultivation, constant care, extra expense.

So when you are told that a grade of coffee selling at 30, 35 or 40 cents a pound is just as good as coffee sold for 48 cents a pound you know "somebody" is stretching a point or two.

Difference in price has everything to do with the difference in one cup of coffee from another.

It is the difference between the selected, choice, perfectly roasted bean and the scrawny, dry, bitter bean that grew on the poor tree.

It is the difference between a plantation famed for its coffee crops and its rich land and trees and the plantation whose only farmer is sun and rain and whose trees are neglected because the word "quality" is not the idea that's running the plantation.

And who wants to waste money by buying poor coffee? When you buy cheap coffee you do not really save a few cents per pound, but you waste the actual price paid for the coffee.

For inferior coffee means that the joy is taken out of the cup, the true flavor and body are not there, the aroma that makes one's mouth water and tastes even better—that rich flavor which makes the whole family hurry down to breakfast.

After all, the best is the cheapest always—when it comes to coffee. Quality coffee not only means better coffee, but it also means more cups to the pound. There has been a lot of talk lately about the price of coffee. But people are apt to forget that quality always regulates price and price invariably regulates quality.

La Touraine Coffee has always been sold upon its quality and always will be. We buy the finest coffee beans grown in the world, at their market price; we roast them carefully and sell them to our thousands of customers "In the Bean."

And it's because of this La Touraine quality that this coffee has commanded the vast and increasing loyalty of purchasers despite the rise in coffee prices.

It is upon quality that the name La Touraine Coffee rests—and we believe that this is a foundation no market price fluctuation can ever assail.

The price of La Touraine Coffee is 48 cents per pound today because its quality is positively and absolutely maintained.

SPECULATORS EXTORT HUGE SUMS FOR "YD" PARADE SEATS

VESTIBULE TO COST $75

Demand $5 for a Single Window Space Along Commonwealth Avenue

Window seats, $5; vestibules, $75; rooms, $40 and upwards."

With preparations for the big parade of the 26th Division in full swing and a grand rush from all over New England for opportunities to view the heroes in gala array, the voice of the speculator is heard in the land.

And he colleps the above prices for vantage points.

Although grandstand seats are being provided by the city and State and are to be without cost to relatives of returned service men, there has been a general stampede for seats in other places along the line of march chiefly from persons not entitled to the seats for relatives.

With the parade still more than two weeks away, a representative of the American sallied forth to find what accommodations were obtainable for the plain citizen who has no "little graft," no relative in the ranks and no friends with windows along the route of the parade.

WINDOW SEATS $5 EACH.

The average price for window seats was $5 apiece. Nothing was to be had for less than $2, even on Columbus avenue. Commonwealth avenue, where most applicants desired to be, commands prohibitive prices. And the agents? Speculators, dear reader; the petty jobber who crops up wherever there is anything that a large portion of the public wants.

Even at this early day, nothing was to be had except from the speculators. Owners and tenants of buildings, lessors of apartments, renters of single rooms—all had disposed of their accommodations long in advance.

Of half a dozen empty houses on Commonwealth avenue, five were already in the hands of speculators. One was unavailable because the owner was out of town and could not be reached. With single window seats retailing at $5, and as many persons crowded into every point of vantage as it will accommodate, some of these space jobbers bid fair to reap rich harvests.

HOTEL VESTIBULE FOR $75.

A well-known hotel had a vestibule which it was willing to let for a few hours at $75. This would accommodate fifteen persons. At another hotel there was a good room on the fourth floor with a bay window, affording a view of the street. This was to be had at $40, but the visitor was given only ten minutes in which to contract for it at that price, as there were other applicants. At this place the hotel was planning to provide a buffet luncheon at $2 a plate, without waiter service.

Janitors of apartment houses unanimously replied that all available window space was already rented.

Vacant stores on Massachusetts avenue were engaged before the American representatives could find the agents. On Columbus avenue window space was priced at from $2 to $5, according to location.

The papers are already being flooded with advertisements for window room. And still they come, thousands of fresh applications daily from those eager to extend to New England's boughty doughboys a "Welcome Home."

London, April 9.—Premier Lenine of the Russian Bolshevist government says in an article reported here from Stockholm:

"The technical methods of capitalism are absolutely indispensable until the communists finds other methods."

This doubtless means that there will be no renunciation on the part of the reds and their proposed world revolution, but on the contrary, says Lenine, it will be pressed with greater vigor than ever before.

The introduction of foreign trade is inevitable, according to the Bolshevist ruler. The Soviets, he adds, must enforce strict factory discipline.

YEAR AND A HALF TO BRING U. S. ARMY HOME

Naval Review Off Because Transports Will Be Needed Until September, 1920

By International News Service.

Washington, April 9.—The Navy Department does not expect to complete the task of bringing the American army out of Europe before a year from next September.

This fact was revealed today in the course of a conversation between Rear Admiral McKean, chief of operations, and Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, at a public reception to Rear Admiral Sims, who has just returned from overseas.

The possibility of holding a naval review at New York was being discussed when it was pointed out that because of the large number of warships now being utilized as transports it would be impossible to have a review until this work was completed. It was then that McKean expressed the belief that it would not be until September, 1920.

HISTORY of the YANKEE DIVISION

by HARRY A. BENWELL

26TH RUSHED TO CHATEAU THIERRY TO HALT DRIVE

This is the eleventh instalment of the "History of the Yankee Division," which began in the Sunday Advertiser-American on March 30. Major-General Edwards paid a tribute to the division in the first instalment. The story of the remarkably quick organization and debarkation of the division followed. It was the first complete unit to land in France from the United States.

The story of sufferings during the Winter months in the training areas and General Edwards taking his entire division into the front line trenches followed. How the Yankees defeated the Germans in their first skirmishes in "No Man's Land" is a thrilling tale. The 26th fought and won their first big fight at Artemont, and followed this by defeating some of the German crack shock troops at Seicheprey. The 102d Infantry won distinction in this engagement. Then came the engagement at Fleury, which was told in the last instalment.

The last engagement in this sector was at Xivray on this date. The Boche laid down a terrific barrage, and then advanced in three columns, two from the north and one from the west. The enemy intended to surround and capture the garrison, which was made up partly of the 103d Infantry and Company D of the 103d Machine Gun Battalion.

One of the enemy columns tried to get in behind from the west and was annihilated by machine gun fire. The other two columns became confused under the treatment they were receiving and fell back, leaving a number of prisoners and many dead. The corps commander said of this that it was the most brilliant piece of work he had seen on any front.

Quirk Leads Daring Exploit

The Germans had brought in long range railway guns near the foot of Mont Sec, which opened up and dropped shells on the headquarters towns. A barrage was then laid down on the first line at Xivray-Marvoisson, where the 103d Infantry was holding. About 4 o'clock a strong force came over and attacked. They got as far as the village of Xivray when the Yankees made a stand. The Germans did not get into the town. The few platoons of New Englanders who were holding the front line then counter-attacked and drove the Boche back to his own lines. Several prisoners were captured by the Americans, whose casualties were slight.

Six hundred Germans were in the raiding party, which had for its object the envelopment of the ruins of Xivray-Marvoisson. Before the raid had really started, the American observers saw the Boche in front of his own lines, called for artillery and machine gun barrage, and created considerable havoc before the German barrage started.

The Germans went forward, and one officer took a platoon across the road running from Xivray to Boncinville, following his own barrage. One of his men being wounded, he stopped to ascertain the extent of the injuries. On looking up he beheld a group of Yankees with fixed bayonets, dashing at him, while his own party had disappeared. The German officer surrendered, but later complained bitterly about Yankee tactics. "The Americans had no right to be where they were," he said. "They were coming right through the German barrage and might have been absolutely wiped out."

In the meantime the reserve units had gone forward automatically to the relief of the Yankees in the front line, and the Boche was once more driven off.

It was during this time that Captain Henry D. Comerais, on the staff of Colonel Logan, was wounded. He was working on a map hanging on a wall in the headquarters of the 103st Infantry, up near the front. Colonel Logan had just left his seat by the window, when a fragment of shell flew by the spot where he had been seated, and striking Captain Comerais on the right hand, tore most of it away. His absence in the hospital as a result was a great loss to Colonel Logan.

Before and after these engagements, small raids were being carried out. The results were not of sufficient importance to obtain mention in the daily intelligence bulletins. Nevertheless, these raids frequently developed instances of dare-devil bravery and quick thinking which were typically American.

On one occasion Lieutenant Thomas J. Quirk and thirty-six men worked through the Boche wire by means of a gateway which the enemy kept open for his own patrols. The patrol managed to get into the town of Apremont, well inside the German lines, when they were discovered.

Before the Yankees could take cover a burst of machine gun fire got six men. Lieutenant Quirk decided that his party was too few in number to stay and fight it out. He gave the order for the men to retrace their steps. This they did, taking the wounded with them. On arriving at the gate in the wire, they found that the opening was being swept by a hail of machine gun bullets through which no man might pass. After a short time devoted to deliberation of the problem, the officer decided that all the bullets were flying at least two feet above the ground. Whereupon he ordered his men to lie down and roll through, which they did, dragging their wounded with them. Every man got back to the Yankee trenches.

CHAPTER X.

Boche Beaten at Own Game.

And so the days and nights dragged by. The New Englanders had by this time found themselves. They were confident and assured, knowing that they had received everything the Boche had to offer, and had beaten him at his own game.

They had stood all sorts of hardships uncomplaining, had gone without sleep, food and equipment. And worst of all, they had lived in horrible mud and the almost continual rain without any lowering of morale. As a matter of fact, they had grown stronger, and bore themselves with a quiet, self-confidence which had been lacking in the days of training at Neufchateau.

While the 26th Division occupied the Toul sector, it was visited by Elsie Janis, the famous actress. She immediately became extremely popular with the men, and called the 26th "my division." The young woman, who was accompanied by her mother, wore three silver stars, so that she could outrank General Edwards and Captain "Al" Ford was made her chief of staff. She remained three or four days, giving outdoor entertainments and cheered the men up. Miss Janis paid the division three visits in all.

On May 25 the Germans had started a drive on the Chemin des Dames, which the 26th had previously occupied. In order that the French on the Toul sector might send units to take part in this battle, the Yankee Division troops took over two more kilometres of front, making twenty kilometres they were holding altogether, or more than twice the size of a normal sector. The line extended from Boucainville up to Limay, and included both places.

Owing to the great width of the sector the problem of bringing up food and ammunition was a tremendous one. The roads were continually under shell fire, and during the various engagements the truck drivers worked night and day. During the Bois Brule fight, which lasted five days and five nights, the guns consumed enormous quantities of shells, but Seicheprey was the worst with which the men had had to deal. During this engagement the men of the ammunition train worked forty-eight hours steadily, despite the fact that Colonel Keville in command had attempted to arrange eight-hour shifts.

Transferred to Toul

The road leading from Beaumont to Fleury ran practically parallel with the front, along a ride of high ground part of the way. The road from Beaumont left to Fleury road and wound down into a valley, toward Mandres with a sharp curve. This was the famous "Dead Man's Curve," and was the scene of many casualties. A camouflaged battery was located in the vicinity and the German shells were continually seeking it.

Throughout the Seicheprey engagement ammunition and supplies were continually brought over this road, notwithstanding the enemy shells. As a result the members of the ammunition train came out with casualties and not a few decorations.

One of the French regiments relieved by the 26th was the 162nd, commanded by Colonel Bertrand. He had been wounded six times and wore the Legion of Honor, the Military Medal and the Croix de Guerre. His regiment had also been cited many times, and was one of the elite organizations of the French army. Colonel Bertrand, who was later seriously wounded and promoted to brigadier-general, always led his men into action, some times mounted and sometimes on foot.

On the last of June an order was received to the effect that the New Englanders would be relieved by the 32nd American Division, less its artillery, and a French division which had just come out of the big offensive in the vicinity of Soissons. The relief occupied three days and nights. Fifty-two thousand troops were in motion in this one sector during the three days of relief. So well, however, were the plans for the relief, prepared by the staff of the 26th, executed that the Boche had no intimation that relief was going on and not a single casualty resulted. This was something unprecedented in the history of relief.

Back for the "Second Marne"

The division concentrated in the next few days in the vicinity of Toul, with Boche airplanes hovering overhead and continually dropping bombs.

Then orders came for the division to proceed to a new area, the location of which was not designated. However, information had been received that the division was to be stationed in Pantin, a suburb of Paris, and every one was jubilant. All believed that the Yankee Division was to march in the July 4th parade in Paris. Equipment was furbished up, and plans were made to enjoy the leaves which everyone was sure would be given. The men had had but two days' rest up to this time, and they felt that they were entitled to a change from the life at the front.

The troops piled aboard the combination horse and passenger trains which pulled out withtheir shouting and singing freight. As the trains passed the tiny French villages, the men cheered and enthusiastically returned the waving and cheering of the inhabitants.

Before the first train had reached Pantin, however, the men experienced acute disappointment. The station was changed to Noissy-le-Sec, and the trains started back from the front. It then dawned on everyone that the division was destined to go back into line.

The trains were dispatched to detraining points in the vicinity of Meaux and Le Ferte, close to the sector lying to the north of Chateau Thierry.

On the 1st and 2d of July orders came in to relieve the Second with the famous Fifth and Sixth Regiments of Marines, which at Bois Belleau had stood off one of the worst of the German drives. The Marines and the remainder of the Second Division had suffered heavily in withstanding this push, and were badly in need of rest.

On the 6th of July the Yankee Division had one brigade of infantry in line and the Second Division had one brigade of infantry out. Then the Boche started the Marne offensive, called the second battle of the Marne. It was believed that this would extend to the north of Chateau Thierry, and orders came from the higher command to dispense with the relief. General Bundy, commanding the Second Division, was told to hold the advanced sector with the troops he had, including one brigade of the 26th. General Edwards, with his division, less the one brigade of infantry and plus the one brigade of the Second Division, was told to hold the second line.

This situation continued three or four days, until it was clearly indicated that the Boche would not extend his operations north of Chateau Thierry. An order then came to renew the relief.

Turned Tide of War.

The division came up to the Chateau Thierry sector with the knowledge on the part of the staff officers that what had gone before was practically child's play to what was to come. They anticipated the break-through, but it is doubtful if anyone realized that this battle was to be the turning point of the war, and that much of the success gained there by allied arms would be due to the 26th Division.

Not even General Edwards, confident as he was of the ability of his men, realized that it was here they were to make a name for themselves which would go ringing down the corridors of time. That the story of their dogged pertinacity, dare-devil courage and sheer cold nerve, which carried them forward when their overworked brains refused to function, would be hailed as the most remarkable exhibition of fighting efficiency that had as yet been seen.

As the division took over the sector General Edwards issued the following:

Headquarters 26th Division, American Expeditionary Forces,
France, July 11, 1918.

General Orders No. 60:

1—At the moment that the 26th Division takes up its position on its third sector in three months, it is fitting and proper that the division commander should take this opportunity to thank and congratulate the officers and men of the Yankee Division on the record that they achieved since the division actively took its place in the fighting lines of the allies for the common cause.

2—You have been taken from a sector where in three battles you have shown that the blood of New England has not attenuated and that the same spirit and traditions which your forefathers made glorious at Lexington and at Bunker Hill still survive in the generation which at Bois Brule, Seicheprey, Humbert Plantation and Xivray have met and defeated the picked troops of the enemy. His four years of experience in active warfare and the ferocity of his methods have not daunted you and on every occasion where you have been called upon to face him you have distinguished yourself with notable valor and brought credit upon your division and upon the people of New England from which you have come to engage in this righteous conflict.

3—A great honor has been conferred upon the whole division in that the French and American High Command has at this time picked your division to come into this critical sector. That you have been so hurried to this sector is the evidence to you all of the opinion of the High Command of the mettle of whic this division is constituted.

4—The past months in battle have brought men and officers into that close union of confidence and affection which have resulted in the growing morale of this division. Looking back on the past four months with its spotless record and known achievements which have been recognized by both France and America, it is with unqualified faith in the future and pride of the past that I see the 26th Division go into a new sector, certain in my conviction that the men of New England will prove once more that they are capable of every effort and every sacrifice which the future may demand of them.

C. R. EDWARDS,
Major-General, Commanding.

How Zeppelins 'Came Across' to 'Raid' United States

It was a dark and stormy night.

Also it was dull as ditchwater at the Zeppelin Club in Zeebrugge. Something had to be done to please Dee Kaiser.

"Let's raid America."

Major Hassenpfeffer was sprechen-a. It was a grand thought.

Five super-Zeppelins were hitched up in jig-time. They started winging over the Atlantic. They hurried so as to get back to tiffin.

Such was the simple beginning of an amazing chain of aerial action which was described in a story from Philadelphia today.

It was a dark and stormy night. Same night.

Blime! But things were dumb at the British aerial bases along England's eastern coast.

Suddenly a couple of sounds——zzz——zzz!

Lookout reports five somethings or other flying westward.

"Up lads and at 'em!"

A squadron of American and British speed planes dashed in pursuit.

On they flew, straight over the Atlantic. The first transatlantic flight was being made.

It was a stern chase. The pursuers gradually closed up the gap.

"Vorwarts!" shrieked the Zeppelineers.

"Hold up there!" yelled the pursuers.

The avenger caught up with their quarry only 250 miles off the New England shore.

"Bang!"

That was an American speed-plane crashing into the leading Zeppelin. The Zep commander hollored: "Going down, this car make no stop between here and the Atlantic ocean."

It didn't. The leading Zepp fell in flames, also in the water.

Well, that simple spoiled everything. That's the trouble with Germans. They are fine disciplinarians. But if their leader is bumped off they won't play. Lieutenant Wurzburger, commanding Zepp 2, mesa-bumped.

"Let's call it a day, Herren. See what the boys in the back room will have and then back to that dear old Zeebrugge."

The four remaining Zepps returned to their base. That's all. They just turned right around and flew right back again. Having flown across the Atlantic it was sure enough to Zip back, of course. Tout made twice in the same place. Two transatlantic flights without a stop. It was all off with the raiding America first.

Your correspondent at Philadelphia also heard that, in the floating wreck of the leading Zeppelin was found the remains of what had been one perfectly good German Admiral. His pockets were stuffed with ground plans, elevations and perspectives for blowing all Manhattan inside out.

What became of the pursuing American speed-plane is lost in the shuffle. The story did not get out at the time. The censor covered it up.

GOVERNOR MAY FORCE PROBE OF LAWRENCE STRIKE

NOW UP TO MILL OWNERS

Must Agree to Arbitrate or Face Blame for Continuance of Trouble

said to be used only when both sides were hopelessly afar.

He was said to be searching for the "psychological time" to propose arbitration. The offer of the strikers to accept Mr. Endicott in toto gave him the opportunity. He "put it up" to the mill owners.

It is said that Governor Coolidge, as indicated by his public statements, is very strongly of the opinion that the mill owners should arbitrate, and that their failure to do so he will force the public probe.

The mill men refuse to believe that there are two sides to this particular industrial question. They are preparing to fight it out to the end.

The general strike committee has not only indorsed the principle of arbitration, but has committed itself without reserve to the decision of Mr. Endicott.

Individual strike leaders are without exception in favor of his interference.

Mayor John J. Hurley of Lawrence is in favor of "anything that will affect a speedy settlement of the strike."

AGAINST ARBITRATION

But mill owners and their local representatives are without exception against arbitration in any form, and they are backed up in their stand by "Big Business," notably by the banking interests.

In the meantime, small business men go to the wall, industrial unrest is spreading from the mills to the outside crafts, the daily life of Lawrence is interrupted, and the city is becoming nationally and internationally known as the battleground of capital and labor.

Governor Coolidge's plea for an amicable adjustment of the labor troubles here had as little effect as if he had been a minor official of a town in another part of the State.

Some of the mill agents were "astounded" by the stand the Governor had taken. Comment on the administration ukase was made warily, and "not for publication."

Much wind was taken from the sails of the Lawrence agencies, which had been spreading the report that the strike was a Bolshevist uprising, by the official recognition of the movement as an effort in behalf of better living conditions for American working men and women.

MAYOR FAVORS SETTLEMENT.

MAYOR HURLEY: I am in favor of anything fair that will bring a settlement of this strike. If arbitration by Mr. Endicott will bring about a speedy settlement, then I am in favor of that.

The textile strike is eating into the economic life of our city, and costing our business men hundreds of thousands of dollars. I would be remiss in my duty if I should overlook a chance for a proper adjustment of the difficulty.

The general strike committee today issued a statement signed by every strike leader of any importance, which accepted bodily the principle of arbitration by Mr. Endicott. The statement says:

When we offered to leave our case to Mr. Endicott to arbitrate, we meant it. Mr. Endicott stated the terms under which he would act, in the letter published April 2.

These terms we accept unreservedly. If the manufacturers do not accept this offer to settle this very unfortunate trouble peacefully the responsibility for the continuance of this strike must rest entirely with them.

In view of no better way to prove that we believe absolutely in the justice of our cause, and make this offer, as stated in our former letter, when we are stronger in numbers and stronger financially than at any time since the struggle began.

WILLING TO ARBITRATE.

Ire Kaplan, secretary of the general strike committee; F. P. Cosgrove, Frank Coco and Joseph Salerno, strike leaders, indorse this collective declaration of principles by individual statements to the effect that they are willing to accept Mr. Endicott's arbitration.

But the mill agents, to a man, reject the plea of the Governor, and say that there is only one conclusion to the present strike, the surrender of the operatives.

WALTER T. HILLIKEN, Agent for the Pacific Mills: I have no time to be bothered with talk of arbitration. I am a busy man. I don't think we would accept arbitration by Mr. Endicott or by anybody else.

JAMES L. MILLIKEN, Agent for Everett Mills: I don't know what the other mill men will say, but I don't think we have anything to arbitrate. We have said our last word. We have nothing to say. What is the use of arbitration?

AGENT ELLIS LAYCOCK of the United States Worsted Company: I have no time to talk to newspapers about anything as ridiculous as arbitration. Of course I have nothing to say as to mediation or settlement by Mr. Endicott.

"NOTHING TO ARBITRATE."

AGENT ROBERT TODD of the American Woolen Company: We gave them what they asked for first, forty-eight hours' work for forty-eight hours' pay. What have we to submit to an arbitrator's. We will not arbitrate.

Agent Walter Lakont of the Wood Mill of the American Woolen Company, refused to make a formal statement, saying that the Boston office of the company was authorized to make statements regarding policy. Later the Boston office refused to make a statement on the subject, saying that high officials were not present.

JOHN MERCER, agent for the Arlington Mills: I am not in favor of arbitration by Mr. Endicott. I would not be in favor of any kind of arbitration. We are well satisfied with the way things are going.

Agents J. A. Clapp of the Prospect and James Boothman of the Ayer mills of the American Woolen Company were unqualifiedly against arbitration.

Mill Owners Acting Like Prussians, Says Congressman Fitzgerald

Feeling that mill owners of Lawrence should be willing to submit their problems to Henry B. Endicott, for arbitration, as long as the strikers are ready to abide by the requirements laid down by him, is strong in Boston today.

Men and women who are anxious to see Lawrence relieved of the heavy burden that the strike has imposed upon the city indorse the plea of Governor Coolidge that the mill owners fall into line.

The Lawrence strikers have already put themselves on record as willing to submit to the rulings of Mr. Endicott. The mill agents have expressed themselves as not interested in the question of arbitration.

"REASONABLE THING."

Miss Mabel Gillespie, a member of the Minimum Wage Commission and secretary of the Women's Trade Union League, said:

"I certainly hope that the mill owners will agree to arbitration, especially now that the request has been made by the Governor of Massachusetts. It seems as if this day and generation we have gotten by the point where anyone might logically expect unconditional surrender.

"It certainly must appear very discouraging to the boys of the 26th Division, who are just getting back, to find the struggle in Lawrence still going on, and it will certainly be disappointing to them to find that in this great industrial centre here, it has not been possible for digital and labor to get together to settle their grievances in a rational way.

"It seems to me that arbitration is the only reasonable thing, as the mill owners will have their chance there to present all their arguments to Henry B. Endicott, Mr. Endicott, as an employer of labor, and a business man, is sure to get their point of view, as well as that of the strikers.

"I can't quite see how the mill owners can refuse to submit the case to arbitration, and it is indeed unfortunate if they still persist in maintaining that attitude."

"ACT LIKE PRUSSIANS."

Congressman John F. Fitzgerald said: "It seems hardly believable, in this day, that there would be any mill owners who would refuse to arbitrate. The mass of people would refuse ought to be compelled by public opinion to give up his mill and his position.

"The world has just been through an orgy of sacrifice, as I thought of before, in which our boys have laid down their lives for the right to live and to live. These mill owners, acting as if they never heard of such a principle that this war has just decided, are acting as arbitrarily as the Prussians. They should therefore have done to them just what was done to the Prussians. Their names and pictures should be published in the American, as those of men unwilling to let Endicott help out. They should be driven forth from the community, as we drove forth the anarchists."

Mrs. Winona Osborne Pinkham, prominent Boston suffragist and thinker: "What I say, I am saying individually, and not as an official of the Boston Equal Suffrage Society. Then let me add that I feel it is only just and right to be expected that these mill owners arbitrate their differences with their employes. Arbitration is logical and democratic. Surely Mr. Endicott's war record is a sufficient guarantee that he would be fair in whatever he undertakes."

Miss Julia O'Connor, president of the Telephone Operators' Union:

"It certainly is most arbitrary and un-American in the obstructionist mill owners of Lawrence to hold up settlement of the strike by refusing to arbitrate. Arbitration is the civilized way to settle grievances. It should be resorted to at once in Lawrence to save further waste of time, material and good human resources.

"In Mr. Endicott the telephone workers have always found a fair and open-minded gentleman. It is unbelievable that all parties, in Lawrence, should not be eager to avail themselves of his efficient services."

Mill Officials Refuse to Comment on the Threat of Governor

In an effort to ascertain the attitude of Boston textile men toward the Lawrence situation, an American reporter today interviewed four officials of leading Lawrence textile mills and attempted to see three others who were reported in the city yesterday but are out of town.

The four men interviewed displayed an attitude of impatience at being approached on the subject and flatly refused to venture an opinion concerning either the Lawrence issue or Governor Coolidge's recommendation that the matter be arbitrated.

One of the mill men declared that he "hadn't the faintest idea what it was all about," and disclaimed any personal knowledge of the Lawrence situation.

OPINIONS REFUSED.

Another intimated that a statement from himself, before he had an opportunity to consult with other textile heads, would be premature. Another referred the reporter to the Lawrence mill agent of the company in question with the assurance that he had full authority to speak for the stockholders.

Their statements follow.

Herbert M. Sears, president of the Everett Mills:

"I know nothing about the Lawrence situation and have only the faintest idea what it is all about. I am merely a stockholder. I am sure I do not know who could be referred you to me. To be sure, I am the president of the Everett Mills, but my office is merely that of a figurehead. If you want to know anything about the Lawrence mills, the treasurer, Mr. McDuffie, in the Hancock Building." (Treasurer McDuffie was "out of town" today.)

Franklin W. Hobbs, president of the Arlington Mills:

"I have nothing to say. No word of mine would be proper at this stage of the game. I don't see anything I can say for publication later I will gladly do so."

SOME "OUT OF TOWN."

William Whitman, president of the Acadia Mills and director of the Arlington Mills:

"I have nothing to say in advance of a general statement from the combined textile representatives—if such a statement is to be forthcoming."

Fessenden Blanchard, assistant treasurer of the Pacific Mills:

John Lyman, president and treasurer are out of town today, but I can assure you that our agent, Walter Lawrence, Mr. Parker, has full authority to speak for the stockholders. Anything Mr. Parker says to the press you can take as representing the attitude of the stockholders."

President Robert F. Herrick of the Pacific Mills, President William M. Wood of the American Woolen Company and President Andrew Adie of the United States Worsted Company were all reported as "out of town" at their respective offices.

LODGE ASSAILED IN MAGAZINE BY HARVARD DEAN

John Gallishaw Compares Senator to "Puppy Dog Barking After Express Train"

"A wily old political fox"—a puppy dog barking after an express train: this was the figure cut by Henry Cabot Lodge in the historic debate with President Lowell of Harvard, according to John Gallishaw in the current issue of the Harvard Magazine. Mr. Gallishaw is assistant dean of the college and a war veteran.

Lodge was on trial for his reputation, says the writer, and now stands "condemned and discredited." The people asked for bread and he gave them a stone.

He opposes the League of Nations "from pride and hatred, not from ignorance." His desire is "to injure the prestige of the President of the United States." "He has devoted himself so long to little things that he is incapable of appreciating big things." "Now he is trying to make a virtue of the vices he is loth to correct." "Wily, plausible, insincere, he has degraded his talents."

These are a few of the strictures which the writer hurls at the Senator from Massachusetts.

"For months," he says of Lodge, "he has levelled all manner of destructive criticism at the League of Nations, sparing no subtle innuendo, omitting no appeal to sectionalism, narrow-mindedness or self-interest, using whatever weapon came to his hand to destroy the structure that promised to bring fame to its builder, because that builder differed from him in his political beliefs.

"People went to the debate in Symphony Hall hoping to hear Lodge the statesman, Lodge the historian and biographer, Lodge the thinker. They found a wily old political fox who wriggled and squirmed in an attempt to evade and befog the issue.

"Intellectual men and women, bewildered by much controversy, went to the debate in the hope that the Senate's native sagacity and vast experience might furnish them some light to guide their feet on a difficult road. They found his experience like the searchlights of a ship which illuminate only the track it has passed."

Later the writer proceeds:

"He does not fancy himself as second fiddle. Let him take heed that he be not denied even a humble place in the orchestra."

In conclusion, Gallishaw says:

"Lodge and men of his ilk can no more prevent a League of Nations than La Follette could prevent the prosecution of the war. Of course, they will try; that is to be expected; there are always puppy dogs barking after express trains."

MILFORD WELCOMES HER VETERANS OF THE 26TH

Milford, April 9.—Milford is gay with flags and bunting today in honor of the Milford men in the Yankee Division, who arrived here at 3 o'clock this afternoon in automobiles furnished by Milford citizens, which are bringing the veterans from Camp Devens. Forty-five members of Company M of the 104th Regiment, formerly Company M of the 8th, came to Milford. They were met on West street by townspeople and Milford school children and paraded, in charge of Sergeant James J. Conway to the State Armory on Pearl street.

O'Sullivan to Sing for Soldiers

JOHN O'SULLIVAN, famous Irish tenor, who has volunteered to sing any song soldiers like best.

John O'Sullivan, the Irish tenor of the Chicago Opera, upon hearing that the 101st Regiment would be mustered out a few days before his concert in Symphony Hall, May 4, has purchased 200 of the best seats for his own concert and proffered them with his compliments to Colonel E. L. Logan of the 101st and his men. He has also offered to sing any song the boys would especially like to hear. His letter is as follows:

"Mr. L. H. Mudgett, Symphony Hall, Boston.

"Dear sir:

"I am informed that the 101st Regiment will be mustered out of the United States service a few days before my concert in Symphony Hall, Sunday evening, May 4. Will you please purchase for me 100 pair of the best seats and present them to Colonel Logan to give to his officers, non-coms and enlisted men as far as they will go. I would feel highly honored if they would consent to be my guests.

"When I was singing at the Paris Opera in 1917, I had the privilege to greet some of the officers of the 101st, and the fact that so many of them were of the same race as myself has caused me to follow their glorious career in arms with the keenest delight.

"And if there is any song which Colonel Logan and his men would particularly like to hear upon this occasion I will esteem it a privilege to sing it for them.

"Yours truly,

"JOHN O'SULLIVAN."

WAR IS STILL ON, U.S. ANSWER TO BREWER'S SUIT

New York, April 3—The war is not over—hence 2.75 per cent. beer is prohibited and unlawful after July 1, when the war prohibitive amendment becomes effective.

That, in effect, is the answer filed by the government to the injunction suit brought by the Jacob Hoffman Brewing Company against United States District Attorney Caffey and the Collector of Internal Revenue.

The company, on the advice of Elihu Root that 2.75 per cent beer was not intoxicating, sought to enjoin the two officials from interfering with its business on the ground that the manufacture and sale of beers containing not more than 2.75 per cent. alcohol by weight was contrary to law.

Two separate answers were filed to the suit. In the case of the Collector of Internal Revenue, Assistant United States District Attorney Earl H. Barnes filed a statement that Mr. Elsner severed his connection with the Treasury Department on March 25 last, following acceptance of his resignation by President Wilson on March 10. As a result of this, he asked that the action against him be dismissed.

MOVE FOR DISMISSAL.

United States District Attorney Caffey and William C. Fitts, special assistant to Attorney-General Palmer, filed papers in a motion to dismiss the complaint as far as it concerns Mr. Caffey.

It was asserted that the suit is in effect an action against the United States, and that the complaint does not show that the United States has consented to be sued. Also, on the face of it, it is charged the suit seeks to enjoin the United States attorney "from performing his official duty with respect to the enforcement of criminal statutes of the United States of a general and public character," and as such should be dismissed.

The gist of the government's argument, however, concerns section 9 of the complaint, which stated:

"Complainant further alleges that at the time the act of Congress of November 21, 1918, was approved by the President, the armistice of November 11, 1918, had been signed by Germany, and the President of the United States addressed both branches of the Congress, and after reading to them the terms of the armistice, stated as follows:

"'The war thus comes to an end, for having accepted these terms of armistice it will be impossible for the German command to renew it. It is not now possible to assess the consequences of this great consummation.

"'We know only that this tragic war, whose consuming flames swept from one nation to another until all the world was on fire, is at an end, and that it was the privilege of our people to enter it in the most critical juncture in such fashion and in such force as to contribute in a way which we are all deeply proud of the great result.'"

THE BREWERS' CONTENTION.

This section of the complaint further alleged that there was not on November 21 last or at any time since then an emergency or necessity, whether military or otherwise, calling for the prohibition of the use of grain, cereals, fruit or other food products in the manufacture of beer or other malt liquor for beverage purposes after May 1, 1919, nor any emergency or necessity calling for the prohibitions of the sale of beer or other malt liquor for beverage purposes after June 30, 1919.

It declared that neither of the prohibitions was necessary or proper in any sense within the intent and meaning of the Constitution.

It was alleged that these prohibitions were wholly arbitrary, and were not enacted in contemplation and in pursuance of any purpose to carry on the war or raise or support armies or to provide or maintain a navy in any way or manner.

NO PEACE YET, IS CHARGE.

Mr. Caffey in his reply to this says: "The Court judicially knows that a state of war, which existed between the United States and Germany on August 10, 1917, has not ceased and that the President of the United States has not ascertained or proclaimed the fact or date of such termination, and that the war, which existed on November 21, 1918, has not been concluded and that demobilization has not yet terminated, nor has the President of the United States determined or proclaimed the date of the conclusion of the war or of the termination of demobilization.

"And the allegations in Paragraph 9 of the bill and exhibit, therein referred to do not show that the said war has been concluded or terminated or that demobilization has terminated, and said allegations and exhibit should be stricken out and dismissed from the bill of complaint as insufficient, irrelegant and impertinent."

For these reasons Prosecutor Caffey said that he should not be held to answer the complaint and that it should be dismissed.

The war prohibition amendment, designed to save grains for food purposes, was passed by Congress on November 21, ten days after the signing of the armistice.

TO FIGHT IMPORT OF GERMAN POTASH

By International News Service.

Washington, April 8.—President Wilson will soon be appealed to by Western Senators to prevent the shipment of German potash to this country, if circumstantial advices from The Hague stating that thousands of tons of the German mine products are to be sent here in American food ships now at Hamburg are confirmed by the State Department.

Senator Hitchcock, whose State of Nebraska produces the largest proportion of American potash, permitted it to become known here today that he was so incensed by the "threatened dumping of German potash, dug by half-fed and abused prisoners of war, on the American people," that he had requested the State Department for definite information regarding it.

UNFAIR TO AMERICANS.

Senator Hitchcock, who was chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee until the Republicans wrested control of Congress from the Democrats, joined with Senator Henderson in declaring that to "permit great quantities of German potash to be thrown on the American market would destroy an American industry fostered by patriotic Americans during the war, when they were asked by the Departments of Interior and Agriculture to come to the rescue of the American farmer, when his supply of fertilizer was jeopardized by the shutting off of German potash supplies."

Before starting on his League of Nations speaking tour in the East, Senator Hitchcock took steps to insure full and adequate protection for American potash investors, of which, in Nebraska alone, there are 7,000, representing an investment of $15,000,000, from what was described by him as "Germany's first serious and systematic move to secure her commercial and industrial rehabilitation at the expense of the rest of the world."

PREDICT SOLID ACTION.

Senator Hitchcock was not the only member of the Senate who was thoroughly aroused. Other senators, irrespective of party lines, were equally forcible in their opposition to American imports of German potash being allowed.

They predicted that the new Congress would be almost solidly arrayed against such imports and that, if the administration did not act, means would be found to keep German potash out of this country. They believe means will be taken either by special tariff legislation like that already planned to protect the engendered American aniline dye industry, or by a bill like that sponsored by Senator Henderson which would have permitted the Secretary of the Interior to have restricted or forbidden potash imports under a licensing system, but not the measure been lost in the legislative jam during the final days of the late Congress.

GETS TWO YEARS FOR VIOLATING MANN ACT

Sidney Alexander, alias Paul Ashford, of Lincoln street, Worcester, charged with violation of the Mann Act, has been sentenced by Judge James M. Morton, Jr., of the United States District Court to serve two years in the Atlanta penitentiary.

The defendant, who is twenty-four years old, retracted his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty. He was indicted on the charge of transporting two girls, aged sixteen and seventeen, respectively, from Providence to Worcester for immoral purposes.

Homer H. Leep of Griggs avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., who was indicted a few days ago on the charge of impersonating a uniform of the United States navy, was sentenced to six months in the Plymouth House of Correction after he had retracted a plea of not guilty. While wearing this uniform Leep is said to have defrauded Miss Louise Noonan, a clerk in a Boston bank, out of $60 by means of a check.

William Watton of Somerville pleaded guilty to stealing funk from the Charlestown navy yard, where he was employed, and was fined $25.

The shells were landing thickly around the Lawrence boys when the shell bearing the name of their home city came whizzing over and landed in the midst of them. It was American made ammunition and the local lads have saved pieces of it as souvenirs.

Avona Corsets measure up to the highest standard of corset manufacturing. Materials and workmanship are the best obtainable. Skilful designing has succeeded in creating models which seem to eliminate flesh, so scientifically do they distribute it. Every woman, from the debutante to the grandmother, may find among the Avonas the type of corset best fitted to her needs, corsets in which the smartest new lines are achieved by moulding, not compressing, the figure, which are neither too light nor too heavy, but give just the proper measure of support.

Sailors on Agamemnon Declare Y. D. Boys "Finest Ever Brought Home"

"The Y. D. is the finest bunch of fellows we have brought back," Seaman Boyd W. Kelly of the Agamemnon told an American reporter during a tour of inspection about the Agamemnon. From the boiler-room to the crow's nest, to engine room, mess halls, officers' dining halls, the four was made.

The Agamemnon is in fine condition and the sailor boys are making the ship smack and spick before starting on their return voyage to France. Both Seaman Florent H. Mayer of Chicago, and Seaman Boyd W. Kelly, who acted as special guides for the American reporter, have been on the crew of the Agamemnon since she was commissioned. Both men still have some time in serve on their enlistments.

"The Agamemnon is the most consistent transport going," said First Lieutenant Harrison L. Baker of Pasadena, Cal., the officer of the deck. "The ship made the record trip in war time for a commercial transport of fifteen days and twenty-three hours."

SAYS DRIVE LIKE FISHING TRIP.

First Class Private Arthur J. Lemieux of Company M, 102d Infantry, has had some interesting experiences as interpreter of French for the third battalion of the 102 Infantry. He is of French descent, and at the St. Mihiel front he was interpreter of "la belle langue de France" for Lieutenant-Colonel Bonafant.

"We had a good time at St. Mihiel," he said. "We had all the souvenirs that we wanted and all the prisoners that we wanted."

"It was like a fishing trip," explained another Company M, 102nd Infantry boy.

"How dry I am," the band at Commonwealth Pier played, while troops and officers grinned.

As a company of Red Cross canteen workers marched the length of the pier, their duties being done, the band struck up "Smiles," while the boys cheered and smiled.

BANDS CHEER CROWDS.

"Till We Meet Again," was begun by the Iver Band. The Deer Island Band, at the opposite end of the pier, caught the strains and "fell in line," the co-operative effort of the two bands being an inspiring outburst of music.

The last troop train was leaving the pier when "Auld Lang Syne" was played, followed closely by "Smiles."

"What it this 'shimmy' that are all talking about in Boston?" asked Private James T. Malloy, B Battery, 101st Field Artillery, a Waltham boy, as the troops were waiting for trains to carry them to Camp Devens. The exhibition of "shimmy" dancing by two husky men of M Company, 102nd Infantry on the concrete floor of Commonwealth Pier indicated the boys had evidently not forgotten how to dance a la America, even though they had their heavy packs on their shoulders and their rifles slung over their arms.

THEY ought to be; it doesn't cost any more to have them that way. The question is—what is style? You can't put it into words—neither can we; but we can put it into clothes. You'll see it in the general "air;" in the lines; in the turn of a lapel; in the slant of a pocket.

We know how to create style for the man of 20 and the man of 50; we know how to make clothes that stay stylish—all wool; careful tailoring. We guarantee satisfaction—or money back.

He was lieutenant of the minute men at West Cambridge, now Arlington, on April 19 1775 and called his company together on the green near where the Unitarian Church in Arlington stands. The bullets were presented to the society by Mrs. A. E. Hardy of Newton Lower Falls, daughter of the late Addison Hill.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood in 24 hours; they strain out 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can realize the need the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent drink-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Advertisement.

Tinkering the Calendar

THE Peace Conference will be asked to consider a calendar reform. One proposition is to have each month twenty-eight days, with one day over and two in the leap year. Another suggests a year of four quarters, each with one thirty-one day and two-thirty-day months, saving as by the first plan, one or two extra days.

Shrewd and Audacious Scheme to Grab Water-Power of New England

Now that the American has turned its searchlight on the gigantic hydro-electric power grab that is being steered through the Legislatures of Massachusetts and the Northern New England States, there is talk at the State House of amending the bill to meet the objections of those who oppose such exploitations of our natural resources by private monopolies. In fact, some amendments have already been submitted to the Waterways Committee, but on examination they all appear to be intended to secure better terms for the smaller independent owners of mill privileges—the small fry that the big fish is preparing to swallow—not to safeguard the interests of the present and future consumers of light, heat and power.

The truth of the matter is that the bill before the committee is so radically wrong, so vicious in principle, that no amount of amending can cure it. Moreover, if the protesting independent companies do secure by their opposition the better terms they are after the result will be the same as when Carnegie held up the Steel Trust for a quarter of a billion or so above the true value of his plants. The ultimate consumer always foots these bills, and in this case EVERY DOLLAR WON BY THE INDEPENDENTS WOULD REAPPEAR WITH A LIBERAL MARGIN OF PROFIT IN THE MONTHLY BILLS OF THE BUYERS OF LIGHT AND POWER FOR A GENERATION TO COME.

Here are a few plain facts which the American urges every member of the Legislature and every user of artificial light and power to keep steadily in view until this great issue is settled:

1. Modern improvements in the production and transmission of electricity are about to send the gas jet to the scrap heap, to join its predecessors, the kerosene lamp, the whale-oil lamp, and the candlestick. Gas and electricity can be produced from coal, under the best modern conditions, at nearly equally low rates, but the distribution of gas is necessarily far more costly than the distribution of electricity. MASSACHUSETTS GAS COMPANIES ARE KEPT IN BUSINESS TODAY ONLY BY THE HIGH EDISON RATES FOR HOUSEHOLD ELECTRIC LIGHTING, AND THESE HIGH RATES ARE MAINTAINED BECAUSE BY INTERLOCKING DIRECTORATES AND INTERLOCKING STOCK OWNERSHIP THE INTERESTS OF THESE TWO SUPPOSEDLY COMPETING PUBLIC UTILITIES HAVE BEEN MADE IDENTICAL.

2. The continued existence of this profiteering combine IS NOW THREATENED BY THE COMPETITION OF ELECTRICITY PRODUCED BY WATER POWER. Storage reservoirs, mainly in the Northern New England States, could utilize water power that now runs to waste to produce electricity as a by-product more cheaply than the Edison company can produce it from coal, because the main cost of building the reservoirs could be met, as the Cole bill proposes to meet it, out of the increased values given to mill privileges by equalizing the seasonal flow of the streams. Under independent ownership, public or private, the reservoirs would undersell the Edison, force down the electricity rates, and drive the gas companies out of business in short order. The construction of such reservoirs by strong independent companies, notably the New England Power Company and the Turners Fall Company, being already an accomplished fact, the only course open to the gas-electric combine was the one now taken—to link together the three great sources of artificial light, heat and power in a profiteering Triple Alliance, by the familiar methods which have made the Sherman Act a dead letter, and then to hoodwink the State Legislature into turning over the undeveloped water-power resources of all New England into a supposedly competitive, but really monopolistic, private ownership and control.

It is a shrewd and audacious scheme, modeled on the general lines of the methods by which the corsairs of high finance have within an ordinary lifetime monopolized our coal, our oil, our lumber, our supplies of meat and sugar, and the most fundamental of our manufacturing industries. HAS THE LEGISLATURE OF MASSACHUSETTS THE INTELLIGENCE TO DISCERN AND THE COURAGE TO THWART IT—OR MUST RECOURSE BE HAD TO THE PEOPLE'S NEW VETO POWER IN THE AMENDED CONSTITUTION?

If One People's Freedom Is Not Safe, Then None Is Safe

The Australian Parliament demands fiscal independence for Australia—which means complete independence. The Australians will get what they demand.

The Irish people demand independence for Ireland.

The Egyptian people demand independence for Egypt.

A Boer delegation is on its way to Paris to demand independence for the South African Republic.

These are not backward, illiterate or helpless people.

We would like to know what argument used to justify the independence of the Poles, Czecho-Slovaks and Jugo-Slavs does not also apply to the desires of the peoples held in subjection by the English Government, and clamoring for freedom from that subjection.

The world is NOT safe for democracy when freedom is permitted only to some peoples and denied to others.

If it is right that England should hold Ireland, for example, in subjection against the will of the Irish people, then it was right for any nation to hold other peoples in subjection. In that case, the only test of a nation's right to tyrannize over others is its might. And if the doctrine that might makes right is to be indorsed again at Paris, then the right of self-determination is denied.

This is no carping question, no light question.

It is a momentous question, and if the answer given by the Paris conference is a wrong answer, a shuffling, evasive, hypocritical answer, the world might as well begin to prepare now for war.

Don't Let Them Drift

Ye TOWN GOSSIP

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By K. C. B.

DEAR K. C. B.—Supposing you had been a soldier in France and had come home expecting to find your old position open to you. And when you called at the office you found it occupied by some one else. And the boss made excuses and told you to drop in again in a week. And you did. And the boss had the girl tell you he was out when you knew all the time he was in. What would you do?

Please answer this in your column, because the boss reads it every morning.

HARRY L.——.

MY DEAR Harry.
IN THE first place.
I'D MAKE up my mind.
THAT I'D lost my old job.
AND IF I was quite sure.
THAT THE boss was in.
WHEN HE told the girl.
TO SAY he was out.
I'D KEEP dropping in.
TO THE old place.
ABOUT ONCE a day.
AND I'D make him lie.
TILL HE got sick of it.
AND KEEP him hiding.
OR SMOKE him out.
AND MAKE him tell me.
HE DIDN'T want me.
AND AFTER that.
I'D FORGET about him.
AND LOOK around.
FOR ANOTHER job.
AND I'D do all this.
IN SPITE of the fact.
THAT IT may be true.
THAT THE new man
IS A better workman.
THAN YOU used to be.
AND THAT that's the reason.
THE BOSS is keeping him.
AND THERE must be a reason.
AND IF that's the case.
YOU'D BE very foolish.
TO GO back again.
IF YOU had the chance.
AND, ANYWAY.
I'D NEVER worry.
ABOUT THE things.
THAT OTHER people.
DO TO you.
WHEN YOU know you're right.
AND IN this case.
IF THE boss is wrong.
AND HE probably is.
OR HE wouldn't lie.
AND SAY he was out.
YOU CAN rest assured.
THAT IT'S worrying him.
A WHOLE lot more.
THAN IT'S worrying you.
FOR THE only things.
WORTH WORRYING about.
ARE THE things we do
THAT WE shouldn't do.
AND FINALLY.
IF I were you.
I'D FORGET about it.
AND GET a new job.
AND IF you can't do that.
GO ON around.
AND TAKE a poke at him
FOR ALL 'a me.
I DON'T care.

LUCKY HIT

There's one man who cannot be blamed for looking in his mirror often. He is Frank Turner of Brockton, a sapper in the Canadian Railroad Engineers, who is just back from overseas. His trench mirror stopped a German bullet right over his heart. Every time he looks in that mirror Turner realizes what a narrow squeak he had.

"THE SAME" FOR MR. RAINBOW

The brand of welcome that Boston and New England are giving the Yankee Division impresses Major-General Clement A. F. Flagler, commander of the 42d (Rainbow) Division, who returned on the Agamemnon ahead of his command. He wants the same for the Rainbow boys when they return to New York.

"AGGIE," AHOY!

The Germans named it the Kaiser Wilhelm II. for the former war lord. The United States scrapped that name and made it the Agamemnon for the classic king who led the Grecian expeditionary force against Troy. But the doughboys of the A. E. F. wouldn't bother with Hellenic four-cornered names. To them the great transport is familiarly known as "Aggie."

NEIGH, NEIGH!

Would it be proper for delegates to the Master Horseshoers' convention, which is to be held at the Quincy House on April 30, to arrive in automobiles?

FALSE ALARM

Listen, my children, and you shall hear,
Not of the gallop of Paul Revere,
But of the remarkable, weird and droll
Errand of Farm Hand Jepha Stoll.
Jepha hitched up and he drove with speed,
Flying his whip to the flying steed,
Over the road for a mile or more,
Up to the nearest grocer's store.
Bought him some matches and back he drove,
Built him a fire in the kitchen stove,
Heated some water to thaw his teeth,
To thaw the uppers and those beneath.
Fales teath they were and they'd frozen tight
In a glassful of water left over night,
And that was the reason, dispatches say,
That Jepha rode hard at the break of day.

ON CONTROLLING YOURSELF

More nervous and irritable every year and no apparent effort to control yourself—this fact stands out, even to yourself, does it not?

Recently you have been placed in positions where you have sensed it strongly that a cool head is necessary.

You need no better proof than you already have that you must get a grip on your nerves and your will power.

Now, this does not mean that you must tie yourself up into harder knots in your effort to overcome a serious condition.

You may need more rest, you may need more occasional recreation, you may need more pleasant conditions at home, or at the office, or wherever you work; but whatever is the cause, remove it before it is too late.

It is just possible that you are eating too much, or you are eating the wrong kind of food, too much sweet or too much starch.

Then it may be control of your appetite which you need in order to relieve the state of your nerves; such things have happened.

One thing is certain, you won't get any better till you accomplish self-control. Get at it.

WHEN A GIRL MUST STAND ON HER OWN TWO FEET

By Winifred Black

THEY are going to take a journey together, the two old friends. A beautiful journey across the wide continent—such a journey as could not be taken anywhere in the world but here in our great, broad sweet, generous America.

They leave New York going up the Hudson, across the prairies, climbing the mountains and sliding down into valleys, leaving Winter and snow and ice behind them, and waking up in the morning in the orange groves, all in blossom—and they will talk together on the way out, the two old friends.

I wonder what they will talk about? The things they see as they are passing through—the people on the train—the new daughter-in-law and the new son-in-law and what the old relatives of the new family think of the match?

Will they talk of old times? Of how they played together in the woods, and went out after wild flowers and pretended to be very grown ladies in robes of sky blue velvet and white satin, and how they quarrelled and called each other names and said they would never speak to each other again as long as they lived, and how they cried and kissed each other and made up again?

The Big Moments

Will they tell each other the real secrets of their real lives—these two old friends—I wonder—and get a little fleeting comfort out of a few days of real companionship, snatched from the hurry and scurry and confusion of modern life as a pearl is snatched from the grimy bed of a turgid river?

I hope they will—I do hope they will. For somehow as I go on in life the things that I remember longest are the little, unimportant things that didn't seem to matter at all at the time. There on the porch at twilight with one I loved and couldn't understand.

The music in the evening with the sweet girl singing an old-fashioned song just for me and you. My thought of her mother and how her mother smiled on the day she died.

The two or three poems we read together under the blossoming apple boughs, my three friends and I. One of the friends has gone on the long, long journey and one is very rich and great and has no time either for poetry or for old friends now, and one is so sad that I am afraid she doesn't dare to read anything but the funny papers.

Like a Light in the Dark

Yet, somehow, out of all the wreck of life and its chaos and struggle, these few little quiet hours of real happiness and real understanding—how they shine like a bright light strangely flooding a darkened room!

What good do we get out of all the rush and hurry and scramble anyhow? Why do we let it take such possession of us?

I'm glad the two old friends are sensible enough to take five days out of life and set them in the gold of travel as a precious jewel is set in a golden ring. As long as they live they'll remember that journey and it will be to them like a green spot in a desert dry and terrible.

Good luck to them, long days and quiet nights—only I hope they won't quarrel about who is to get up first in the morning, and I do hope neither of them will be stingy about tipping the waiters in the dining car, for it isn't great affairs like deep-rooted jealousy or antagonism that makes the quarrels—it is the little, foolish, trivial, useless things.

Sometimes I think that we never really learn how to live until we are just about ready to die, and that does seem such a pity—doesn't it?

APE ONLY ANIMAL THAT CAN THINK

Why apes are probably the only animals that can think is an interesting scientific article in next Sunday's Magazine Section. Some conclusive tests have recently been made between the largest and most intelligent Chimpanzee in captivity and the "ape man" in the Ringling-Barnum and Bailey Circus, which confirm the conclusions that scientists had already made from studying the brains of other animals. Have You Any Oil Stocks?
Farewell to Flies

——By Arthur Brisbane——

(Copyright, 1919.)

If you have oil stocks, of the right kind, not pretty ones printed to sell to fools, hold on.

British ships, including twenty-nine new Cunarders intended to hold the Atlantic supremacy, will burn oil instead of coal.

And the enormous fleet of sixteen million tons that the United States has built and is building with the humorous idea of selling them to private individuals for a great deal less than cost, will also burn oil.

The world is going to need more oil than ever, which means, perhaps, that Mexico, where so much of the oil lies will, with Great Britain's assistance, be persuaded to recognize property rights and refrain from shooting even Americans.

Hindenburg has built an army of volunteers to put the German republic on its feet. They think they will be able to control the Bolshevik movement, and give Germany a chance to start a government, instead of being managed by a mass meeting.

Various explanations are offered as to why Hindenburg, strong imperialist and servant of the Kaiser, was persuaded to stay in the army and work for the Socialist government when it came to power.

They say Hindenburg's greatest victory was conquering himself and working for the Socialist government. That may not be so. Hindenburg, a powerful man, nearing seventy, may have tired of "all highest" incompetence, tired of taking orders from and shouldering the mistakes of the Crown Prince.

It may have been something of a relief to go in with Ebert, the barytes maker, and other men that have their feet on the ground and do not pretend that God has chosen them to know more, own more, do more and kill more than other men.

Whatever Hindenburg and his army may do in Germany, Bolshevism is spreading amazingly elsewhere. It appears to control Bavaria, Hungary, Russia, Finland and to be growing in many countries.

The great force in Bolshevism is identical with the power that spread Mohammedanism over almost all of Europe, in the early centuries.

It is a ferocious, vindictive, ceaseless movement of propaganda, not content to believe for itself, but determined to make others believe.

And what Bolshevism teaches and promises is not so different from the teaching and promises of Mohammed. He said, "I give you the perfect religious doctrine on earth, and I give you after you die a Heaven full of eternally beautiful young ladies, fountains made of solid musk, spouting wine that does not intoxicate—and your wives will be left behind."

Bolshevism says to its followers, no matter how little he knows, or how little he has done, "I give you perfect political doctrine, declaring you as wise and worthy as any man, and I offer here on earth the possession of everything that others have built and that you have envied."

All very nice while it lasts. Mohammed's soldiers died with great courage, for every man thought that when he died he moved immediately to that promised haven, where the ladies never grew old.

The Bolshevists appear to fight with a courage something like it.

The army has begun a gigantic organized fight against the house fly, which carries disease. Millions have talked about the house fly each Summer and nothing has happened. But with the army at work something will happen. The great army camps will show that it is possible to stop flies dragging disease from filth to the food of children.

And after the army has shown it, the nation may do it.

The British, it seems, are to have the honor of crossing the ocean first in a flying machine.

The attempt will be made on April 16. The journey, it is hoped, will be made in twenty hours. There is wonderful conquest of time and space, probably due to the war.

There are hundreds of young men in America that would have liked to be the first to make that flight, and they could have done it. The encouragement was lacking.

However, American genius created the machine, although American government hadn't the brains, energy or honesty apparently to develop it. And the nation must be content with that.
